Two Days Old

Comfort in Bigness

There Is Improvement

Mr. Baer's Few Words

By Arthur Brisbane

WE ARE ACTUALLY in the new year, now two days old. Soon nearly all of us will have forgotten that it is a new year and go along in the usual humdrum way.

A few, with imagination, will say hereafter: "1931 was the beginning of my success." May you be one of them. Success is not difficult, and it is much more pleasant than failure.

Sometimes, when things seem to go wrong, it is a comfort to be reminded that nothing matters very much. If the earth fell towards the sun it would melt like a flake of snow falling on a red-hot stove, long before it could reach the sun.

And if, in turn, our gigantic sun, a million times as big as the earth, fell towards some of the really big suns in space, it, also, would melt before it could reach that sun's surface.

Prof. Shapley, with his forehead high and his ears low down, the best arrangement, tells you that Harvard Observatory has found and measured "about 18,000 new galaxies, each an island universe."

An island universe contains millions of suns. One little group, called the "large megalanic," has 200,000 suns, every one 150 times brighter than our sun; and 2000 suns that are 10,000 times as bright as ours.

Under such circumstances, will you please tell us what difference it makes whether Anaconda Copper goes up or down?

It says in Ecclesiastes: "A fool also is full of words: A man cannot tell what shall be."

Nevertheless, men of wisdom tell us that better conditions have started already.

Mr. Lamont, secretary of commerce, sees a distinct upturn in business, and, also important, the conductor of one of the busiest Central Railroad of New Jersey trains says: "I know times are getting better. I can see it in the faces of passengers, business men that have traveled with me for years."

New York newspapers report "A joyous New Year's Eve" with five resorts raided.

Mr. Arthur ("Bugs") Baer, philosopher and an absolute teetotaler, expresses humorously the thought of many Americans living under prohibition as follows:

"We're going to start the new year right by wondering how we got home last night. The last thing we remember was seeing a constellation of policemen's buttons."

One writer describes Wall Street brokers as celebrating the death of 1930, "with a pensive sadness." A broker "pensively sad" would be worth seeing.

Sad or glad, brokers are advised not to sell their seats, as they have done recently, far below value. Stock prices may rise and fall, but "one-eighth of one per cent" goes on forever.

Seats will go above $300,000 each. And in the next really great boom they will go to $1,000,000, in spite of their being watered 40 per cent, in accordance with Wall Street custom.

S. Parker Gilbert, formerly in charge of reparation payments, enters the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., making 19 members in the firm.

One interested in business and profits, landing in the J. P. Morgan firm, is like Sinbad the Sailor landing in the Valley of Diamonds. To such a J. P. Morgan partner you may apply Stevenson's lines:

"Rome to the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill."

No more worry.

Uncle Sam begins the New Year up to his neck in wheat. Mr. Legge, head of the Farm Board, would forbid short sales, and would propose closing up the Board of Trade, under some conditions.

Laws cannot stop short selling, as Mr. Legge well knows, any more than they can stop whiskey buying. And every grain man knows that the government sooner or later, must sell its grain accumulation.

Our problems are trifling compared with those of Great Britain. A labor government, that was to find employment for all, has twice as many idle men on its hands as when it started, and for nine months of the fiscal year just ended has a deficit of $205,000,000 — $55,000,000 more than a year ago.

The marvelous thing is that Great Britain goes placidly along, with organized labor in charge of government. What would be said here, what would be the shrieking if union labor were suddenly put in charge of the United States?

The Japanese prime minister, Hamaguchi, seriously wounded by an assassin's bullet, is improving. On the New Year, al-

PANAMA GOES TO CONTROL OF REBELS

President Arosemena Taken to Jail; Gen. Quintero and Party Are in Control

U. S. WON'T INTERVENE

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—State Department officials said today that American intervention in Panama as a result of the revolt was unlikely. American intervention in cases of disturbance of public order is permitted under the Panama-American treaty of 1903. The attitude of the State Department was that in the event public order was not unduly disturbed, intervention would not be required.

Colon, P. C. Z., Jan. 2—Sixteen persons were reported killed today when a group of young revolutionaries, headed by Gen. Manuel Quintero, overthrew the government of the Republic of Panama, imprisoned President Florencio Arosemena and Vice-President T. Gabriel Duque and set up a provisional junta.

President Arosemena this afternoon, from his cell in Ancon jail announced his resignation and it was sent to the junta.

The junta dispatched an urgent message to Ricardo Alfaro, Panamanian minister at Washington, requesting his immediate presence in Panama. It was rumored her Alfaro immediately chartered a private plane in New York to comply with the request.

JOBLESS PROBE TO BE OPENED BY SENATE

Col. Arthur Woods and John Barton Payne Are to Be Questioned by Senators

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—A congressional survey of unemployment and relief problems confronting the nation will be begun next Tuesday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's emergency committee for employment, and John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, will head the list of those to be questioned.

RELIEF DISCUSSED.

On their testimony is expected to hinge the decision of supporting any further relief steps. Senators LaFollette (R.), Wisconsin, and Walsh (D.), Massachusetts are urging a direct appropriation of $100,000,000 to defray relief expenses of the unemployed and asking this information of Col. Woods:

1—Any information in his possession relating to extent of unemployment.

2—Measures for relief of distress caused by unemployment in the various cities.

3—His recommendations concerning the extent to which public works must be expanded is a substantial reduction in unemployment during this year is to be brought about.

PAYNE FACES QUIZ

The Senate asked the committee to ascertain from Judge Payne:

1—Conditions in the drought-stricken states.

2—Whether the American Red Cross can provide adequate relief to all needly persons.

3—Conditions in the cities and towns of the country caused by economic depression and resultant unemployment.

Judge Payne will be heard by the committee on Tuesday and Col. Woods on Wednesday. Others to be called on these days include Maj.-Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army Engineers; Thomas H. Macdonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads; James A. Whetmore, acting supervising architect, and Director Roop of the budget.

"Honor Killer" Freed by New Mexican Code

Mexico City, Jan. 2 (AP)—Jesus Ballasestin, Mexico City merchant, was released from custody today under the first application of that section of the new Mexican penal code which legitimizes killing in defense of honor. Ballasestin returned to his home recently and found there Francisco Montes Corona and Senora De Ballasestin. There was a fight and Montes Corona died in a taxicab.

Explosion Tosses Scores From Beds

Monessen, Pa., Jan. 2 (AP)—Fire which followed a terrific explosion in the business district today caused damage estimated at $125,000. An entire block was destroyed. The explosion, believed to have been caused by gas, hurled a score of persons from their beds.

That Man's a Couzens of Mine

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

All aboard for the unethical and indiscreet railroad.

New trunk line of chatter started by Senator Couzens.

Mr. Couzens whistled for a big crossing that time.

Now, senator, the holiday merrymaking is over. Take off that paper hat.

When you are talking about the President it's a national hook-up. You can't say such things about our first executive so early in the year.

We thought we were all going to be pals this year but Senator Couzens seems to want another romp.

Mr. Hoover hasn't answered the dignified senator yet. But we are going to be fair about the whole thing.

WOMAN'S CARGO PLANE TO HOP ATLANTIC

Mrs. Hart and MacLaren Fly Tomorrow With Freight for Paris; Plan Two Stops

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. W. S. MacLaren plan to start tomorrow on the first transatlantic flight attempted with a cargo-laden plane. Their object is to demonstrate that ocean flying can be taken out of the stunt class and put on a sound commercial basis," they announced today.

The flight, with 200 pounds of food products aboard, will be from New York to Paris by way of Bermuda and the Azores. The specially-built cabin monoplane, The Trade Wind,' equipped with pontoons, will be piloted by Mrs. Hart, New York widow, who holds a transport pilot's license.

STOP IN BERMUDA

It will be navigated by Lieutenant MacLaren, Annapolis graduate and former navy flier.

MacLaren estimated the elapsed time of the flight would be about 48 hours and the flying time about 44 hours. Hopping off from the North Beach seaplane base at 6 a. m. (E. S. T.) they hope to reach Bermuda at about 2:30 p. m. A mechanic awaits them to overhaul the plane's engine.

The plane, a cabin model, has places for six passengers, but the space for four seats has been converted into storage room for the cargo. The two stops, the fliers pointed out, will permit them to devote to the pay load some of the carrying capacity that would have to be used for fuel and oil if the flight were without stop.

GAS UP AT HORTA

In addition to demonstrating the feasibility of carrying a pay load, the fliers said they would show that the South Atlantic can be flown in all seasons with proper equipment and personnel.

The Trade Wind will carry 220 gallons of gasoline on its New York-Bermuda hop, and will take on 400 gallons more at Bermuda for the flight to Horta, the Azores.

At Horta, which Lieut. MacLaren expects to reach in 21 hours from Bermuda, another 400 gallons will be taken on for the flight to Paris, where the plane will be landed in the Seine.

Criticism Kills Hoover Boost Plan

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—A plan of the magazine "World's Work" to publish in newspapers an open letter praising President Hoover's administration has been abandoned because of "unfavorable and untimely publicity," the editors announced today. It was to have been an advertisement paid for by sponsors who were asked to underwrite not more than $100 apiece of the expense. Sen. Harrison of Mississippi had assailed the plan.

85 Illinois Bank Thefts Net $300,000

Chicago, Jan. 2 (INS)—Eighty-five bank robberies were committed in Illinois during 1930, it was announced today by the Illinois Bankers' Association. Total losses in 1930 were $300,000. They amounted to $110,000 in 1929.

Sixty-seven bank robbers were arrested in Illinois during the year. Six were killed on the spot, 3 were sent to the penitentiary, three were executed and 28 are awaiting trial.

BEST WAY OUT HE SAYS IN NOTE LEFT IN AUTO

Watertown Man Takes Boys for Ride and Shoots Them on Lonely Lincoln Road

Peter W. Fletcher, Jr., 35, of Greenville rd., Watertown, shot and killed his two boys in an automobile in Lincoln today and then committed suicide.

A note left by him in the car indicated that he was insane and feared his sons, Arthur, 13, and Richard, 11, had inherited his insanity.

Fletcher was a dealer in metals and the son-in-law of Carl Olson, a wealthy upholsterer of Watertown. The scene of the tragedy was a wooded section of Trapelo rd., a mile and a half from the center of Lincoln.

E. A. Rowe, driving an oil truck from Belmont to Lincoln, found the bodies.

SAW BLOOD ON BOY'S HEAD

He saw the Fletcher car, a sedan of expensive make, parked in an unusual position by the side of the road, and as he passed he saw blood on the head of a boy sitting in the back seat.

Thinking there had been an accident, he stopped his truck and walked back to offer assistance. He was horrified to discover the boy he had seen was dead, the body slumped in the corner of the seat, a bullet hole in the head, and that the body of another boy was slumped over against a door.

Rowe ran to his truck and raced into Lincoln Center where he summoned Police Chief John Kelliher. The chief notified the Concord barracks of the State police and sped with Rowe back to the scene.

CHIEF IS STILL RUNNING

The motor of the machine was still turning over when they arrived. Many motorists evidently had passed the car without suspecting the grim horror it contained for, although Trapelo rd. is the main thoroughfare, there was nobody by the sedan.

A glance inside verified for Chief Kelliher the truth of Rowe's excited report. Then, on the floor of the death car a note was discovered. It read:

"My name is Peter W. Fletcher of 10 Greenville rd., Watertown. I am going insane and I do not want to be committed. I am taking the two children with me, because I do not want them to live to suffer the same fate as I.

"THE BEST WAY OUT"

"When you do notify my folks be certain that there is a doctor in attendance. Do not send anyone there without a doctor.

"I hope that my relatives and the world will forgive me for my act. It is the best way out."

Chief Kelliher and Rowe, joined

$160,000 FOR PAGE-SHAW

The assets of Page & Shaw, Inc., candy manufacturing company, were sold today to the F. L. Daggett Company of Main st., Cambridge, for $160,000.

Announcement of the sale was made by B. Loring Young, referee in bankruptcy, following a meeting of the creditors at the Federal Building.

Page & Shaw, Inc., which had factories in Cambridge and retail stores throughout the country, was petitioned into bankruptcy last August after the indictment of Otis Emerson Dunham, the president, and a number of others for conspiracy to steal in connection with the sale of $2,000,000 worth of new stock.

Dunham and two brokers, Isaac Hart and Joseph Polliy, were convicted and jailed on this charge.

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP)—The squadron of 12 Italian seaplanes which is preparing at Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, for a transatlantic flight to Rio de Janeiro, will take off Monday for Port Natal, Brazil, the Air Ministry announced today.

JOFFRE'S HEART STILL BEATS

Paris, Jan. 2 (INS)—Marshal Joffre of France, breathing fairly regular, was reported unchanged today after more than 20 hours of continued unconsciousness.

An official bulletin issued by his three attending physicians at 7 a. m. today (2 a. m., Eastern Standard Time), said:

"The night passed without incident. There was no change in the marshal's general condition."

A similarly worded bulletin was issued again at 12:15 p. m. (7:15 a. m., eastern standard time).

According to those who have watched the old soldier, now within 10 days of his 79th birthday, he has moved or stirred only rarely since sinking into the comatose state. That and the beating of his heart remained the only signs of life.

Rubbish Fire Smoke Fills South Station

Commuters at the South Station early today were somewhat surprised to find the concourse filled with smoke. It came from a fire in a small room where rubbish was collected. Damage was estimated at $100.

MARINE PLANES HUNT NICARAGUAN JUNGLES FOR AMBUSHERS

BODIES OF 8 VICTIMS ARE MUTILATED

Sandinist Rebels Are Fleeing to Honduras After Attack on Patrol

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 2 (AP)—United States Marine detachments combed the hills and jungles near Achuapa, Northern Nicaragua, today, seeking the band of insurgents who Wednesday morning annihilated a patrol of ten Marines in an ambuscade between Ocotal and Apali.

Eight of the patrol, who were repairing a newly erected telephone line, were killed by the Nicaraguans, who were believed to have been commanded by Miguel Ortez, a lieutenant of Gen. Agustino Sandino. The two others were seriously injured.

A report from marine headquarters here today said that at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday morning the patrol was suddenly fired on from all sides. One marine working at the top of a pole was killed in the first volley.

BODIES MUTILATED.

The others immediately began a defense, which lasted for two and one-half hours. Sergt. Arthur M. Fairang of Fort Lyons, Colo., commanding the patrol, ordered Privates Hutcherson to attempt to reach Ocotal for help, but in trying to get through he was wounded.

The insurgent fire was infrequent, but very accurate. Pvt. Austin Jackson of Lawrenceville, Ga., was the last man left standing. He too was wounded and crawled into a nearby cornfield and hid.

The bodies of the eight dead were badly mutilated, apparently by Machetes.

A farmer heard the firing and rode to Ocotal, and gave the alarm at about noon. Joseph J. Tavern with 25 men rushed to the scene. The killed and the wounded were moved to Ocotal and from there, by airplane Thursday, to Managua. Privates Jackson and Hutcherson, the survivors, will recover, it was stated.

PLANES IN HUNT

Retaliatory measures were immediately started. The marine aviation squadron made unsuccessful efforts to locate the insurgents who were believed to have fled into Honduras.

A detachment of 50 marines from Ocotal is now searching the area around Achuaps.

Marine Deaths Now 27 in Four Years

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Col. Frederic Bradman, commandant of the marines in Nicaragua, today said full authority to cope with the bandits who yesterday killed eight of his men.

The loss of the eight men brought to 21 the number of marines killed in the four years the Americans policed the country.

Skirmishes with bandits occurred on Sunday, Dec. 28, near El Saito and on Monday near Bisle. Marine forces suffered no casualties in either battle. Two bandits were killed and five wounded in the second encounter.

Senator King to Demand Withdrawal of Forces

Washington, Jan. 2—Describing the killing of eight Marines as a "tragedy which must arouse the sympathies if not the anger of the American people," Sen. King said he was a "bad thing to send bayonets to support American investments in foreign countries."

He said he would introduce a resolution Monday calling for "absolute withdrawal—politically and militarily—so the Nicaraguans may work out their own destiny."

"We have been in the habit of intervening too much in foreign lands," King added. "It is bound to provoke and has provoked resentments and feelings of ill will on the part of the Latin Americans."

Marines to Stand Pat On Present Forces

Washington, Jan. 2 (INS)—The fighting in which eight marines were killed will not result in any additional forces being sent there, U. S. Marine Corps headquarters announced today.

Watertown Man Kills Two Sons and Ends Own Life

by State troopers, began a search for Fletcher's body and soon found it in the woods, about 300 yards from the roadway.

He had shot himself through the head. The murder weapon, an automatic pistol of .22 caliber, was still clutched in his hand.

The bodies were removed on order of Medical Examiner Wolcott to the undertaking parlors of Joseph Dee in Concord.

WIFE IS NOTIFIED

Watertown police were immediately notified and, acting in accordance with the instructions in the suicide note, sent a physician to the Fletcher home with the officer who bore the sad tidings.

There they found Fletcher's wife, the mother of his victims, Mrs. Ruth A. Fletcher. The home is that of Mrs. Fletcher's parents.

She did not collapse when told of the tragedy, but bore up bravely and sped to Concord to identify the bodies.

At the Fletcher home it was said the father offered this morning to take Arthur and Richard for a ride. Arthur attends Watertown junior high school and Richard an elementary school, but on account of the holidays there were no sessions in the Watertown schools today.

The boys occupied the back seat of the sedan when the three drove away. Fletcher left his wife and his daughter, Naomi, 4, at home. From the text of his note, which police believe was written at home before he left, the father evidently planned to kill all three of the children, but for some reason Naomi did not go on the death ride.

A reconstruction of the crime by Chief Kelliher is built on the theory that after parking the car in Lincoln, shortly before noon, Fletcher got out and entered the back door, taking a seat between the two boys.

BOYS INSTANTLY KILLED.

Arthur, who sat on his left side, was evidently the first slain. He had a bullet wound in the left side of the head. It was his body that Rowe saw, driving by.

After killing Arthur, Fletcher turned in his seat and shot Richard through the right side of the head. The younger boy, from the position of the body, evidently had sought to escape his brother's fate in flight from the car. It appeared that he had reached for the door handle when the bullet struck him.

Both boys were instantly killed in the opinion of the medical examiner.

Not stopping to turn off the motor, Fletcher evidently ran into the woods and shot himself. There were no marks in the snow to indicate that he had spent any time in reflection on his deed.

SAID TO HAVE LOST MONEY.

According to friends of the family, Fletcher had never expressed a fear of insanity and always appeared normal.

He spent last evening visiting at the home of a neighbor, George Chambers, and appeared in excellent spirits. It was rumored about Watertown some time ago that he had lost money in the stock depression, but he never made any reference to such loss to his friends. He had not recently been engaged in business, but had no cause to worry for financial reasons, it is believed.

The Fletchers have lived in Watertown since 1926. They previously lived in Winthrop. Fletcher's father resides in Winthrop now.

Head of U. G. I. Sees Prosperity Ahead

Philadelphia, Jan. 2 (AP)—John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement Company, said today he was so encouraged by the way U. G. I. properties stood the test of the "greatest depression in many years," that construction budgets involving $31,000,000 have been arranged for 1931 without reference to existing business conditions.

Gradual and steady improvement in business is looked for by Mr. Zimmerman this year.

Worcester, Jan. 2 (AP)—As a result of publicity, Patrolman Charles A. Toomey, who had been shifted from a popular downtown beat to a route in the West Side, because he had tagged the official car of Mayor O'Hara, was restored to his former assignment today.

Japan is modern in science, energy and efficiency, but old fashioned in respect for tradition.

Walter Duranty, conservative correspondent, writing from Moscow, says Russia's government has had a successful 1930, although, socializing industry and outraging religious belief, it offended its 120,000,000 peasants.

The Japanese, attacked by earthquakes, fires and tidal waves during the recent past, still greet cheerfully the new 1931, which they call "The year of the sheep." They name the years for the signs of the Zodiac. —1930 was the year of the horse, which is supposed always to have "ups and downs."

Peace and mild prosperity are expected to come with the year of the sheep.

LEAGUE LOSES PRESTIGE ON ARMS PACT

Failures of Preparatory Commission Criticized by Many Nations

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Geneva, Jan. 2—Prestige of the League of Nations as an international force has been materially impaired by the failures charged against its preparatory disarmament commission.

Reactions coming from all over the world reveal today that the draft convention prepared by the commission has aroused disappointment and hostility.

The draft, designed to serve as a basis for the league's proposed world disarmament conference, is replete with blank tables, even blank pages and reservations. Yet, the commission spent five years on it.

Typical of the indecision is the phrase, at the start of the convention, declaring the purpose is to limit and "as far as possible" to reduce armaments. This provides a loophole to avoid reductions, it is pointed out.

LEAGUE IS BLAMED

The League is blamed, for it has been pledged for 11 years to bring about disarmament. In this period armaments, especially in continental Europe, have increased enormously. Two naval treaties since the World War, at Washington and London, have been drafted wholly independently of the League.

Judged by the draft convention, the League is still far from agreement on disarmament. Some of the severest critics are League countries. During the sessions of the convention, for example, the German Reichstag adopted a resolution declaring "most of the participants do not intend to fulfill their pledge to reduce armaments," and asking for the return of the German delegation.

DRAFT CALLED USELESS

Non-league countries have been equally critical. Russia refused to address the report, charging the draft was useless. The United States reserved the right to reopen at the bigger conference the question of supervision by the league commission.

At the same time, the American Government voiced its opposition to any plan requiring compulsory submission of disputes to the league court. Out of deference to the United States, the draft permits disputes to be taken before "any other tribunal."

PANAMA TAKEN BY REBELS

invaded the presidential palace after disarming the police and driving them from the streets.

Groups of the revolutionaries took up posts at important street intersections, armed with rifles, to maintain order.

Archibaldo Boyd, governor of the Panama province, and Ricardo Arias, police chief, were made prisoners.

MARCH ON PALACE.

On the stroke of midnight a large force of revolutionaries marched on the presidential palace. They were met by a detachment of the police force.

Spirited fighting took place, with scores of shots fired. The police found themselves powerless and were driven from the streets.

The revolutionaries then invaded the presidential palace and called upon President Arosemena to resign. He was marched off to prison, where he was later joined by other government and municipal officials, including Mayor de la Osa of Panama.

REBELS TAKE CONTROL

At 5:20 a. m., a spokesman for the revolutionaries announced that a provisional junta had taken over the reins of government, headed by Dr. Harmodio Arias, attorney and long-time political opponent of the Arosemena regime; Francisco Arias, business man, and Dr. J. A. Vallarino, a physician attached to the Herrick clinic.

The Accion Communal, having declared Arias president, sent two hundred members to Colon by train to take over the Federal offices, deposing the incumbent officials.

It was generally believed Governor Galindo will order resistance to the insurrectionists, refusing to acknowledge Arias.

Launching of the revolt at an early hour of the morning when few people were on the streets kept casualties to a minimum.

Wounded in the street fighting was Roswell F. Ayers, former American newspaper editor of Atlanta, Ga., whose home is in Anniston, Ala. Ayers was taken to the Gorgas Hospital with bullet wounds in his stomach and throat. He died several hours later.

TELEGRAPH WIRES CUT.

All cable and telegraph communications throughout the isthmus were cut by the insurrectionists, although wires in the Canal Zone, which is under American jurisdiction, were not molested.

Political opposition to Arosemena, who took office for a term of four years in October, 1928, has been seething for some time, but the active revolutionary movement took the authorities completely by surprise.

As in the case of previous major disorders in Panama, American soldiers were rushed from their headquarters in the canal zone, throwing up a protective cordon around the United States legation.

American soldiers also guarded the international boundary between Panama City, Ancon and Balboa, refusing to permit Americans to cross over into native Panama territory.

GIRL CENTER OF COAST GUARD, NAVY ROW

Wealthy Brunette Spends Lavishly on Both Branches of Service

New London, Jan. 2—The activities of a wealthy and dashing young brunette, who for the past month has swept through the ranks of the United States Coast Guard and the submarine bases here, fomenting disturbances and generally impairing the morale of the two units, may be subjected to rigid investigation, it was learned today.

The girl, known to her admirers as "Tessie," whose exotic beauty, expensive clothes and high-powered car have set the members of both services practically at one another's throats, has led the enlisted men on a continual round of parties, all at her expense.

SPENDS LAVISHLY

Nothing is too good for her guests and, escorted by either coast guardsmen or sailors, she has spent large amounts at inns, roadhouses and cafes in this section.

However, dependent on which branch of the service her guests belonged, she extolled the virtues of that branch to them and at the same time belittled the other. As a result, coast guardsmen were soon receiving telephone calls from angry sailors demanding that they avoid Tessie.

The coast guardsmen returned the remarks with equal emphasis and had blood between the two outfits brewed fast.

PHONE CALL MYSTERY

While there had been no open warfare between the rival factions, matters were fast coming to a head when a strange telephone call, purporting to come from a friend, yesterday informed guardsmen that Tessie had been severely injured in an auto accident near Ocean Beach, outside New London.

Interested guardsmen checked on the call and learned there had been no accident and that none of the hospitals had treated the girl. She could not be reached at her apartment. This started coast guardsmen to thinking seriously about the activities of the girl and now they are wondering what her motive is. They are convinced that the lavish round of good times was prompted by some ulterior motive.

ASKED FOR DATE

The girl first introduced herself to coast guard headquarters about a month ago when she telephoned there asking for a date. She explained she was doing this on a dare. Several guardsmen gallantly offered their services.

She met them in a high-powered car and drove to a roadhouse. When the check arrived, she took it despite the protests of the guardsmen.

Following this party, the calls continued. All agreed that Tessie was a "great sport" and generous. She told them they were perfect gentlemen and much superior to the other men around the town. When pressed on this point she told her guests she meant sailors of the submarine base.

Soon the guardsmen were rudely jolted by telephone calls from the submarine base. These calls couched in anything but endearing terms were, in substance, that Tessie was the particular friend of the submarine base.

COLLEGE GRADUATE

Investigation revealed that Tessie had been entertaining the rival unit just as lavishly and telling the sailors that the coast guards were anything but gentlemen.

Despite yesterday's strange call, coast guard and sailors are ready to fight for Tessie's favor at the drop of the hat. Many are in wrong with their local "girl-friends."

Little is known of the girl even by those who have been out with her. She told them she was a Connecticut College graduate and that she was studying medicine. She also said she was married, but later admitted she was not.

Wife Divorces Father of 3 a Second Time

Springfield, Jan. 2 (AP)—Carrie E. Bouchie of this city was today granted a second divorce from Henry C Bouchie by probate court. They were married in Thompsonville, Ct., in 1913 and in 1916 the wife received a divorce in Keene, N. H. for desertion. They were remarried here in 1921 and three children were born since. The present decree is based on a charge of cruelty.

Woman Collapses in Court, Wins Divorce

Providence, Jan. 2—Mrs. Flora A. Hagerty of Pawtucket collapsed in court today at a hearing of her divorce petition while testifying that her husband, Paul E. Hagerty, a building contractor, had always questioned paternity of their son, Paul, Jr. The son, a private in the regular army, was present as a witness for his mother. Mrs. Hagerty was granted a decree on grounds of extreme cruelty.

Vare and Wife, Poisoned By Food, Have Recovered

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP)—William S. Vare, leader of the Philadelphia Republican organization, and Mrs. Vare today had completely recovered from the effects of food poisoning, which had confined them to their Ventnor home several days. Dr. Elwood R. Kirby, Mrs. Vare's personal physician, said.

Mr. and Mrs. Vare were stricken shortly after supper December 22. Dr. Kirby, who was visiting in Atlantic City, was summoned and ordered them to bed, but their illness did not become known until yesterday. Dr. Kirby said they were at no time in any danger and that they were now "perfectly well."

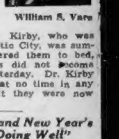
Harry Lauder Blamed for Making Scotland a Joke

Edinburgh, Jan. 2 (INS)—Hns Sir Harry Lauder "done more than any living man to lower and vulgarize the popular conception of Scotland."

Scotland is seething over this controversy. It was started by Andrew Gibb in a book, entitled, "Scotland in Eclipse," where he put forth a profound case for his assertion.

"Lauder as an artist and a comic is a big success," states Gibb, "but surely nobody will say that what he gives us is Scots life. It is a caricature. While that may be all right in a small circle, it is different when you parade it for the world to see."



Sir Harry Lauder

Admirers of Lauder declare, on the other hand, he is the greatest Scotsman alive today and the greatest publicity agent for the greatest country in the world.

Emma Lintz Still on Quest for "Ideal Man"

Los Angeles, Jan. 2—California's men are all right but they don't quite measure up to the standards of the "ideal man" for Miss Emma Lintz, Chicago heiress, who is here searching for the past two years.

Miss Lintz left here yesterday for Bermuda by way of her Illinois home, still searching the world for the elusive man who, she states, will fill all the qualifications and thus win her hand and her large fortune.

Famous Spanish Dancer to Show U. S. Her Art

New York, Jan. 2—Teresina, famous Spanish dancer, is on her way to New York today, aboard the French liner France to create a better understanding of the Spanish dance, which, she claims, has been made grotesque by mediocre Carmens and the movies.

Discovered as a young girl dancing in the Rambla, a promenade of Barcelona, Teresina became premiere danseuse of the Paris Opera House and prima ballerina of the opera in Barcelona.

HEIR TO BUSCH FORTUNE "FOUND" BY FATHER OF NEGRO KIDNAPER

YOUTH TELLS HOW HE WAS TREATED

No Ransom Paid, but Boy Was Set Free on the Promise Not to Prosecute

St. Louis, Jan. 2 (AP)—Charles Y. Abernathy, 28-year-old negro and son of Pearl Abernathy, negro real estate dealer here, was the kidnaper of Adolphus Busch Orthwein, 13-year-old grandson of August A. Busch, president of Anheuser Busch, Inc., and great-grandson of Adolphus Busch, late millionaire brewer, it was disclosed today.

The senior Abernathy brought about the restoration of the boy to his parents yesterday after he had been kidnaped New Year's Eve. Police have taken no action against young Abernathy.

Yesterday Pearl Abernathy telephoned Percy J. Orthwein, the boy's father, told him the boy was safe, and said "as father to father, I want to return your boy." Atty. Harry Troll said no ransom money was paid and let it be understood the price for the release of the boy was a promise not to prosecute Charles Abernathy. The son of the negro real estate dealer today was reported in hiding.

Last night Adolphus was allowed to talk with newspapermen in the presence of his father, Attorney Troll and his brother, Jimmy, five. He said he was not afraid, but complained that the abductor gave him "very dirty" food for breakfast and dinner yesterday.

AMY JOHNSON IN DARING FLIGHT

London, Jan. 2—General astonishment has been aroused by the departure of Miss Amy Johnson, 23 year-old aviator, on a solo flight across and covered Northern Eurasia to Peiping, China.

Leaving Hendon airdrome yesterday, Miss Johnson proceeded to Liege, Belgium, and stayed overnight. She flew today to Cologne and plans to go to Berlin tomorrow. She will take off there for Moscow, whence she will proceed to China, according to her announced schedule.

The Daily Express said Miss Johnson is in ill health and became a neurotic from the strain of her flight to Australia.

The Daily Mail said Amy's parents had been kept in ignorance of her plans, but the Daily Express quoted her mother as saying:

"We approve of the flight because we must. After what she has gone through this adventure will be a relief and soothing for her. She has shown restlessness at home for months."

Bankers Plan to Halt Gold Flow to France

Paris, Jan. 2 (AP)—Representatives of the Bank of France and the Bank of England met here today presumably to discuss methods of preventing continued influx of gold from England into France. These conversations were said to be preliminary to a conference scheduled to take place in London with a view to organizing closer co-operation between the money markets of London and Paris.

Boys Want to Fly, But Girls Hope to Get a Man First

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

Cleveland, Jan. 2 (AP)—Lindbergh and the sciences have captured the ambition of midwestern American boys. Gone to a backseat is the fascination of Babe Ruth cowboys and detectives.

Girls are not so certain. It appears that they would like best to become typists, but really expect to be housewives, and do not rate movie careers as so good.

Twenty-six thousand boys and girls of Kansas City and Topeka answered the question on which these findings were based as reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Prof. Harvey C. Lehman of Ohio University, Athens. The sexes were evenly divided and the ages ranged from 8½ to 18½.

They were asked both what they liked best and what they were willing to do.

The boys' rankings of willingness were aviation first, and then the three applied sciences, civil engineering, architecture and electrical engineering. In the "also rans" were all the old favorites, cowboy being fifth, the Babe Ruths 10th Casey Joneses 13th and detectives 26th. Aviation came first in the "likes."

The girls ranked typist first when expressing their likes, but when asked what they were willing to do, housewife moved to the on and typist dropped to second place. Movie actresses went down to rank 13th and nurse 11th.

Telephone operator never rose above 20th position. Saleslady rated last in the willingness answers, and dropped out completely in the tabulation of likes.

H. Meltzer of the Psychiatric Child Guidance Clinic of St. Louis reported that men forget 3.18 per cent more pleasant experiences than women, while the feminine folks forget 3.22 per cent more of the unpleasant than do men.

Shakespearean Suit

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, author of note, is involved in a $30,000 counter suit filed in a New York court by Jane Cowl against Louis A. MacLoon, her Pacific coast booking agent. Last year MacLoon sued Jane for a loan of $27,906. The suit was based on a 1920 contract, in which Miss Cowl was to play "Romeo and Juliet" at $2500 per week. He says he advanced Jane $10,000 and expenses over her salary. Jane says her reputation and bankroll has suffered to the extent of $30,000 because the show closed after four weeks and MacLoon failed to provide with additional bookings. (Hal Phayfe photo.)

'31 REVELLERS CLOG COURT DOCKETS

Judge Dowd Lectures Wayward Youth as Parents Plead; Many Arrested as Drunk

A crowded docket accompanied the opening of the municipal court for the new year today, with a number of persons achieving the dubious distinction of first arraignments in 1931 on various charges, mostly growing out of New Year's Eve celebrations.

Some were sent to jail, others fined, while two boys won leniency through the intervention of parents, after Judge Thomas H. Dowd had deplored the necessity of decent people being forced to start the new year by appealing for wayward children.

The first person arraigned on a charge of drunkenness was William Barry, one of 30 men and two women held on that charge, 118 other men having been released as first offenders.

NO NOLOS GO.

Barry wanted to plead nolo, but Judge Dowd insisted on beginning the year right.

"Either you're guilty or you're not guilty," he said, and Barry pleaded guilty, being fined $5.

The first person to head the docket was Edward Curtis, 18, of Trenton st., Charlestown, a victim of a New Year's Eve celebration.

Officer John O'Brien testified Curtis was leading a procession in Tremont st., New Year's morning, waving a lantern.

O'Brien said Curtis refused to desist. The lantern was stamped with the name of the Edison Co., and he was charged with larceny.

Curtis told Judge Dowd he found the lantern in a Trenton st. hallway. He got a month's suspended sentence.

Robert Hoffman of Sterling st. and William Pate of Cabot st., both Roxbury, were the first arraigned on serious charges—carrying a loaded revolver.

TWO GET YEAR EACH.

Hoffman was seen passing the gun to Pate, who admitted ownership and said he was carrying it to protect his life as "they are raising hell in the Shawmut ave. district." Both were found guilty and given one year each. They appealed.

The two boys who won leniency were Patrick J. Doherty and Joseph E. Flynn, each 19, both of Woodlawn st., Forest Hills. They were captured by police in a Columbus ave. lodging house early New Year's Day, with stolen property in their possession.

After listening to the parents of one of the defendants, Judge Dowd said:

"You young men are here on a very serious offense. Not only is it humiliating to the court but it shows a lack of appreciation on your part to force decent parents to start the new year by coming here to plead for children who are undeserving of their care and kindness. If you have any appreciation left I'm going to give you an opportunity to show it to your parents." He imposed suspended sentences.

NEW POOL MAN FINED.

Frank Bianco of North st., North End, started the new year by being arrested for selling tickets for a new pool, which goes into operation today with the discontinuance of clearing house reports.

Sergt. Flannery and Special Officer Kern arrested Bianco in State st. and took him to court, where he was fined $100.

The first ticket speculator arraigned was Adolph Vogel of Callender st., Dorchester, arrested in front of theater New Year's Eve. After looking over his long record, Judge Dowd observed:

"You're about to graduate. I think I ought to give you a degree," and fined him $50.

Police Commissioner Hultman said he was not about the city New Year's Eve, but he understood it was orderly. Supt. of Police Crowley said he visited the hotels and found them well conducted, with very little apparent drinking.

The New Year's celebration in Boston in addition to the 140 arrested for drunkenness, netted 10 arrests for liquor law violations, 10 alcoholic cases at City Hospital, 10 arrested for using illegal automobile number plates and resulted in 16 false alarms of fire.

43,000,000 H.P. in Rivers of Canada

Ottawa, Jan. 2 (AP)—With a billion dollars invested in electric stations, Canada emerged from 1930 one of the world's leaders in water power development. The department of interior estimates a maximum of 43,000,000 horsepower could be generated from Canadian rivers. Turbines totalling 6,000,000 horsepower have already been installed.

Apoligizes, Dies

AFTER SCRIBBLING notes to his father, saying he was fed up on life, and to his host, apologizing for his act, Roger D. Whedon, Harvard '29, society aviator and polo player, shot himself to death in an automobile after a party at Darien, Ct.

HARVARD FLIER IS SUICIDE

Roger D. Whedon, Harvard graduate of 1929, society aviator and polo player, was dead, a suicide, at Darien, Ct., today.

Whedon fired a bullet through his head early yesterday after leaving a gay New Year's party at the Wee Burn Country Club. He shot himself in the limousine of John Ruggles, his host.

"Life is futile. I have seen and done everything in the world and there is nothing more worth living for. I am going on my last venture."

The foregoing note was scribbled to his father during the party. Another note, addressed to Ruggles, offered apologies for the tragic end to his party.

Whedon was the son of Burt D. Whedon, New York corporation counsel. He had resided with his father in Long Island, N. Y.

He prepared for Harvard at Polytechnic Preparatory School, Brooklyn, N. Y. At Harvard he played undergraduate basketball, hockey and polo. He was a member of the Harvard Dramatic Club, Instrumental clubs, and an editor on the Harvard Lampoon.

"Honest Graft" Probe Sought in New York

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Alleging systematic waste and tolerated incompetence in the government of New York city and county, the Institute for Public Service, headed by William H. Allen, asked W. Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, today to press for an investigation. In a letter Mr. Allen said citizens were disillusioned by previous graft hunts and declared:

"New York is sophisticated enough to know it loses vastly more from 'honest graft' than from corruption."

Fair and Warmer Weather Is on Way

The mercury started upward this forenoon and the weather man promised "fair and warmer" for tonight and tomorrow. No storms are in sight. The official low during the night was 20, and the drop was so rapid late yesterday that many automobiles were frozen where they were parked. A mild west wind, showing a tendency to shift toward the south, was sounding the death knell of this short-lived cold snap. A year ago today the mercury soared to 57.

Wickersham Board Is Still Delaying

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Prospects of a report on prohibition in the immediate future by the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission were further dimmed today as word came from its headquarters that the recess would continue until Monday or Tuesday. Only a few members were present. Chairman Wickersham was in New York, and possibly will not return until Tuesday.

Woman Burned in Blast Asks $25,000

New London, Ct., Jan. 2 (INS)—A $25,000 damage suit by Mrs. Margaret King against Thomas Haynes and his wife of Old Lyme was filed in superior court today. Mrs. King was burned at Haynes' filling station in September while her car was being filled with gas.

NEW DRIVE FOR LEAGUE COURT ALARMS G. O. P.

Leaders Battling Propaganda of Churches for Extra Spring Session

Washington, Jan. 2 (US)—Concerted efforts were being made by Republican leaders today to have President Hoover announce definitely that he will not call an extra session of the Senate next spring to consider ratification of the League of Nations Court.

Until the chief executive gives such assurance, Senate leaders confess themselves almost powerless in the fight to stave off a special session of the entire Congress, which Mr. Hoover is most anxious to avoid.

That the Senate is in no mood to consider the court issue was demonstrated a few weeks ago when the foreign relations committee voted to postpone consideration until next December. This was done by Republican votes.

BACKED BY CHURCHES.

Since then, however, President Hoover has been the target for tremendous propaganda in favor of early consideration of the revised court protocols. The drive is being engineered by the Federal Council of Churches, one of the most powerful propaganda organizations in the country.

Senate Republicans fear Mr. Hoover may yield to this pressure and call a special session of the Senate alone, as he did last spring to push through ratification of the London naval treaty.

The job of the G. O. P. leaders is to convince the President that unless he goes on record as against this special Senate session, a combination of Republican Insurgents and Democrats may hold up the supply bills during the present short session and thus force both House and Senate to convene here in the spring.

ROOT TO BE HEARD.

Evidently alive to this situation, the "White House" stated a few weeks ago that President Hoover had no intention "at this time" of summoning the Senate in the spring. This was before the propaganda drive was started, however, and the Republican leaders now fear that it will be insufficient to satisfy foes of the court.

What they want is a statement by Mr. Hoover himself giving assurances that no extra Senate session will be called.

Welch Miners May Go Back Tomorrow

London, Jan. 2 (AP)—The expectation prevailed here today that differences between coal miners and operators in South Wales would be ironed out tomorrow. A temporary arrangement which would permit the miners who have walked out against a reduction in working hours and a cut in wages to return to work was looked for.

Labor organizations say not more than 1200 out of 150,000 are at work. Operators declared possibly as high as 10,000 men are at their jobs.

1931 RESOLVES TEST CLOSES

A veritable bombardment of last minute contributions marked the close today of the big New Year resolutions contest.

Thousands of good resolutions were submitted, each with the hope that it would be of value to others as well as to the makers, and it was this unselfish spirit that made the contest a valuable community effort. Within one week such enthusiasm was generated that its effect is bound to be felt for many months to come.

High hopes for the speedy return of prosperity and the solution of unemployment led all other aspirations in the thousands of resolutions submitted. Moreover, most contributors have a definite plan to help bring about this desire, and their common motto is "pull together."

SAFER DRIVING

Safety first on the highways, and the earnest desire of hundreds of individuals to live up to their highest ideals marked a large proportion of the resolutions submitted. The golden rule was prominent in thousands of replies.

Even the school children caught the spirit of making a good resolution and trying to keep it during 1931.

One little fellow, eight years old, of Braintree resolved to play all games fair and be a sport if he loses.

A little girl in Roxbury thinks the world would be better if children obeyed their parents without grumbling, and her chum thinks "early to bed and early to rise" is a motto good for all.

RESULTS NEXT WEEK

The judges of the contest, President Daniel Marsh of Boston University, President Frank S. Spaan of Northeastern University and Judge Sadie Lipner Shulman have a big job ahead of them to choose the 25 most valuable resolutions submitted in this contest.

Their decisions will be announced early next week, when the winning resolutions will be published.

The Boston Evening American thanks every one who sent in a New Year resolution and hopes that each will keep his resolution throughout 1931. If kept, these resolutions will make our city and state a better and happier place in which to live.

Electrical Leader Predicts Big Year

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Although the short term outlook in the electrical industry shows a lower trend than has been evident in recent years, the situation has many aspects that promise improvement, said F. A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., in a statement today.

"The extension of electrical service to the farms of the country is progressing with increasing rapidity," he said.

$612,647 SPENT BY DEMOCRATS; OWE $636,222

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Expenditures of $612,647 for 1930 were reported today by the Democratic National Committee.

The Republican congressional committee spent $264,936, and the Republican senatorial committee $90,203. The Democratic National Committee closed the year with a deficit of $636,222, of which $225,250 is owed to Chairman John J. Raskob, $402,368 to the County Trust Company and $3500 to Frank Kiernan, all of New York.

BARUCH GAVE $1000

Among the contributors were Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg, Mass., who gave $10,000; Bernard M. Baruch, Jr., who donated $1,000, and John W. Davis, a former Democratic Presidential candidate, who gave $500.

The Republican congressional committee received $249,482, also ending the year with a deficit.

The Republican Senatorial committee made the following expenditures in 1930: to Senator McNary, Oregon, $5,250; J. A. Hanion, Montana, $10,000; Rep. Dickson, Iowa, $5,000; Senator McMaster, South Dakota, $2,500; A. H. Hahn, Denver, $10,000; Rep. Pritchard, North Carolina, $2,000; George N. Brimmer, Cheyenne, Wyo., $7,500; Herbert B. Holt, Las Cruces, New Mexico, $2,500.

DRYS SPEND $12,000

The Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, spent $5,311 and the Anti-Saloon League of America, $6,762.

The largest contributor to the Anti-Saloon League of America was Mabel Lyman of Waltham, Mass., with a donation of $1,000. William A. (Billy) Sunday of Winona Lake, Ind., spent $693 for the league.

Roxbury Man Held for Gasoline Theft

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 2 (AP)—Stephen J. Lynch, of Roxbury, Mass., was held for trial in the Glastonbury Town Court today for theft of gasoline from a filling station in Glastonbury last night and also for operating a car without a license.

In the machine with Lynch when he was arrested were Lillian Cobb, 16, of Roxbury; John Neville, 16, of Whitehorse, N. J.; Ambrose G. Golden and Lee P. Fisher, all of Roxbury.

Two Shot Dead in Quarrel in Hotel

Victor, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP)—The proprietor of the Black Diamond Hotel and a roomer at a near-by boarding house were shot to death early today following a midnight brawl in the hotel. The dead are James Antonio, 53, the proprietor, and Ralph Zucco, 35.

Police are seeking Antonio Muscolini, 38, as the alleged murderer.

FAMILY RETURN, HOME ABLAZE

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Levenson and their three children returned from a wedding last night to find their home on the second floor of 38 Vesta rd., Dorchester, badly damaged by fire.

The blaze started between the second and third floors of the three-story dwelling from a defective chimney. Harry Kantro, on the first floor, was alone in the building.

Jacob Putterman of 32 Vesta rd. saw smoke and gave the alarm. Loss was estimated at $5000.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Cohen, owners of the building and occupants of the top floor apartment, were also away.

Charlestown Man, 66, Still Seeks True Identity

Charles C. Cheney, of Charlestown, doesn't know who he is and wants to find out.

This was the reason he gave for seeking out the Boston Evening American office with a story of his life—so far as he knew—in the hopes that some reader may tell him who he really is.

Cheney was born in California, son of a prospecting father, named Edward Montgomery Cheney, who married a daughter of the Merriotte family.

ONCE IN EAST

Difficulties arose, he has since learned, and he was placed in an orphanage.

His quest for a trace of his family has taken him through the United States since and even to Honolulu through an army enlistment he assumed for the purpose of running down a clue there.

At the age of eight, he said, he was taken east to live with a stepmother but ran away from home at 14 and made his way to Dubuque, Ia.

Later, he went to Kansas City, Kan., Denver, Colo., and then to a ranch in Wyoming.

HUNTING AT 66

A search in California failed to show any trace of his mother's family, he said, and he worked his way here, finally settling at 1 Central pl., Charlestown. He is now 66 years old.

He said he learned in his travels that his mother had married again and was buried some years ago as Maud Emma Van Zandt. When she married his father, however, she bore the first name of Mary, he said.

NEW COINS FOR PAPAL STATE NEARLY READY

Vatican City, Jan. 2 (AP)—Gold, silver, nickel and copper coins of the new Papal issue will be circulated within a short time, but Italian money will continue in use in Vatican City.

The largest denomination is a gold 100 lire piece, worth slightly less than five dollars. On one side is a right profile bust of the Pope with the inscription, "Pius XI Pont. Max. Anno IIX." On the reverse side is a figure of Christ holding a scepter and globe with the inscription "Stato Citta Vaticano 1929."

The silver coins, worth five and ten lire, also have a bust of the Pope on one side. On the reverse face of the 10 lire piece is a figure of the Virgin; on the 5-lire coins a figure of St. Peter.

The issue—exclusive of the gold, which probably will be more of a souvenir of the signing of the Lateran treaty than as an actual monetary unit—is 1,000,000 lire, or about $50,000.

PAROLE SOUGHT FOR 'BRIBER'

Harold C. King, former chief of police of Chelmsford, joined with other witnesses in urging the state advisory board on pardons today to recommend to the Governor that he exercise clemency in regard to James M. Casali, serving six to ten years in Norfolk prison colony, for attempting to bribe King.

Casali was committed October 25, 1927. He was represented at the hearing today by Judge William McDonnell.

Mrs. Casali urged clemency that her husband might assist her in bringing up their four children.

King told of being approached by Casali on three occasions, but added that he did not think the prisoner was "behind the operation of the still" that figured in the case.

A contractor and a grocer said they were willing to employ Casali as soon as he is released.

Removal of Richest N. Y. Judge Is Urged

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Referee Samuel Seabury, in charge of an inquiry into the lower courts of New York, recommended to the appellate justices today that Magistrate Louis S. Brodsky be removed from office. Brodsky is reputed to be the richest magistrate in New York. Last month he issued a general defense of his conduct after allegations that his account in one brokerage firm was guaranteed by a man who was arraigned before him and discharged.

Brother and 2 Other Youths Held in Death of Girl

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Why pretty Beulah Limerick was shot to death and by whom, baffled Washington police today, two days after an undertaker accidentally discovered a bullet hole in the back of her head.

The authorities had turned loose a score of persons questioned since the girl was found dead Wednesday, but they held her brother, Vernon Limerick, Richard Reed, who lived at their house, and Edward Paddy, who had been her escort to a dance Tuesday night.

A "jealous suitor" perhaps killed her, police thought, and they scanned the long list of her intimate friends for clues.

HER DIARY STUDIED

They studied, too, a diary the 19-year-old girl had kept. It contained, they said, many frank references to a number of her male friends.

The story of the three men, as police told it, was that Paddy took the girl from the dance about 1:30 Wednesday morning.

Reed rose about quarter to five, and went downstairs as was his custom to light a fire in Beulah's room.

She lay on her side, the covers over her head, he said, and he did not disturb her. Soon he left for his work.

BROTHER FINDS BODY

Vernon took up the story. His alarm clock went off at 8:30. He called to his sister and, receiving no answer, went down to her room. She was flat on her back, the covers drawn back to her waist. He could not rouse her and went to his mother's apartment for aid.

A doctor, noticing blood flecks at the girl's mouth, pronounced her dead from hemorrhage. A routine death certificate was issued. Late that evening the undertaker found the bullet hole. Police found four revolvers in the home or premises frequented by the Limericks, but none would fit the bullet in her head.

Boyce Must Pay to Keep Wife Cool

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Nancy Boyce of Park ave. won $1250 a month temporary alimony in Supreme court today in her suit for separation from Harrison Boyce, formerly vice president of the Boyce Moto-Meter Co. She charged abandonment by her husband.

Last July a million-dollar suit was filed against Boyce, charging him with alienating the affections of his ward, Mrs. Jacquelyn Athana, from her husband, John J. Athana.

Woolworth Is Given Back $2,568,101 Taxes

Washington, Jan. 2 (INS)—The F. W. Woolworth Co. of New York today was given $2,568,101 in two adjustments in the taxes it paid from 1917 to 1926. The Illinois Central Railroad, of Chicago, was given a credit and refund totalling $606,721.

Donald Berry of Roxbury Killed

Newark, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP)—Donald Berry, 21, of 421 Winthrop st., Roxbury, Mass., attached to the Lake Denmark naval depot, was killed by a train yesterday.

Sears hands ALLSTATE volume savings on to you in reductions of 11% to 19% on these famous tires

$4.98 29x4.40 BALLOON Pair. $9.60

One out of every ten tires bought for replacement in 1930 was an ALLSTATE—consistently priced about a fourth below competing brands. This unprecedented volume enables Sears to effect additional economies in manufacture and distribution for 1931. These savings—increased by the present lower cost of raw rubber and cotton—are now shared with American motorists. The new reduced prices are far and away the lowest on record for tires of comparable quality.

Buy a Pair of Tires and Save Even More

As all experienced motorists know, it is better to put on a pair of new tires instead of just one: front tires should be alike for ease in steering; rear tires should be alike for greatest traction, and to minimize skidding on slippery roads when brakes are jammed on quickly. Now that Sears offers a special reduction on a pair of ALLSTATE Tires, it is more than ever worth your while to buy two at a time for your automobile.

CHARLTON WILL BONDS TOTAL $75,000,000

Bonds of $25,000,000 each, the largest ever recorded in Massachusetts Probate Court annals, were filed today by three executors of the will of Earle P. Charlton, 5 and 10 cent store pioneer and millionaire mill owner of Fall River.

The three were Ida S. Charlton, Frederick M. Mitchell and the First National Bank of Boston, who filed at Bristol County Court.

Charlton died November 21 at Westport Harbor, shortly after his return from Palm Beach, Fla., where he had been for his health.

His will, filed a week later, provided for a charity trust fund of $1,500,000, in addition to a larger number of public bequests among hospitals, medical colleges, nursing associations and social welfare bodies.

The will was allowed last week by the court and today's bonds were filed according to law.

Hurley, Bushnell to Open Law Office

Vineyard Haven, Jan. 2—Francis X. Hurley, about to become State auditor, and Robert T. Bushnell, retiring district attorney of Middlesex, will become associated in the practice of law with offices in Barristers Hall, Boston, it was announced by Bushnell last night at a banquet at the Mansion House in honor of the auditor-elect.

The banquet was tendered by more than 100 business men and friends, who have known Hurley through his law practice in this town.

Three Children Get Million as Legacy

Beverly Hills, Cal., Jan. 2 (AP)—The new year looks like a million dollars to three Beverly Hills youngsters. The children, William Berry Charles, 2; Clarence Jesse Bennett, 5, and Ethel Bennett, 4, began 1931 with inheritances from grandparents of more than $1,000,000. The Charles boy is a cousin of the Bennett children.

The estates were ordered probated today.

$10,000 Bribery Verdict Upheld

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—The bribery conviction of Frank Ed. Warder, former state superintendent of banks, was affirmed today by the appelate division of the Supreme court. In November, 1929, Warder was sentenced to five to ten years in Sing Sing prison for accepting a $10,000 bribe to forego examinations of the City Trust Co., which failed for $5,000,000.

Burmese Riflemen Pursue Insurgents

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 2 (AP)—Agile Burmese riflemen today trailed fleeing insurgents through the jungles and hills toward the mountains, where the rebels, driven from their headquarters at Alantaung Camp, hoped to find hiding places.

About three score insurgents were taken prisoners by the Burmese troops in the assault on Alantaung Camp and 27 were killed. The mysterious leader of the rebellion, which has disrupted northern Burma, escaped.

Missing Broker to Face Larceny Charge

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Robert Lee Harrison, 29, year-old broker indicted for grand larceny last February, surrendered today after being missing for months. He has gone to Italy under a fictitious name and returned about a month ago.

Reds Start Strikes in 20 German Mines

Bochum, Germany, Jan. 2 (AP)—Communist agitators started "wildcat" strikes in 20 mines in the Ruhr Basin today, in some instances forcibly preventing workers from entering the pits. Union officials said the strikes were unauthorized and called upon union men to resist the Communist attempts pending settlement of a wage dispute.

EINSTEIN JOINS ASTRONOMERS IN STUDIES

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2 (AP)—Dr. Albert Einstein today joined the men studying the behavior of a universe to the structure of which they say his relativity theory appears to offer a clue.

These men, earnest workers of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, have the world's largest telescope—a 100-inch reflecting mirror—at Mount Wilson.

This observatory, an attraction for the master mathematician and physicist, is investigating the universe, studying its parts, its structure and its behavior.

SPECIALIZE ON SUN

The moon and planets are studied as members of the solar system, to which the earth belongs.

The sun, a typical star and by far the nearest of them all, is studied intensively.

The stars are known to form a definite system, isolated in space. Other similar systems, the nebulae, are scattered as far as the telescopes can reach, and perhaps farther. With the great reflectors and accessories it is possible to study the whole of the observable region of space.

REVERSES STUDY

Dr. Einstein at one time formed a mental picture of the cosmos, a mathematical concept developed by calculation. Here he finds a man who has seen and studied physically the observable universe, and who has found that observable distances of 300,000,000 light years are apparent.

This man is Dr. Edwin P. Hubble of Mt. Wilson. He has much to show to Dr. Einstein.

Court Puts Guard on Liquor Evidence

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Three padlocks, each opened by a single key in the hands of a separate keeper, today controlled the liquor room in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

It seems that high-powered evidence necessary to the prosecution of several cases had a way of disappearing.

WOMAN HELD IN TAMPA KILLING

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 2 (AP)—A volley of pistol shots killed John E. Jones, 52, city detective, last night as he sat in a parked auto in the outskirts of the city with Mrs. Hattie L. Steward, widow of the former president of the Steward-Mellon Tile Co. of Tampa.

Mrs. Stewart and her companion was slain by a man "who talked like a woman," and who approached the car, saying, "now I've got you where I want you," and began firing.

Mrs. Steward was detained by Sheriff Joughin for questioning. He said the door glass broke on the running board, and he expressed opinion that if the shots had been fired from the outside the glass would have fallen inside the auto.

2 Boys Drown While "Following Leader"

Bristol, R. I., Jan. 2 (INS)—A game of "follow the leader" over the ice of a reservoir here today cost the lives of two boys. August Cabral, 11, fell through a hole in the ice. His brother, Manuel, 14, made a brave attempt at rescue, but both were drowned.

ASTROLOGER SEES MANY CHANGES COMING IN 1931

Trend of Business to Be Uneven; Great Disaster in Fall; Progress in Government

By EDNA BLAKE HALD

WHAT KIND OF CONDITIONS will there be in 1931? How will they affect us? What will happen?

It is probable that everybody would like to know the answers to these questions.

Through astrology we can learn very much about the conditions, and, by studying them carefully, we may be able to deduce many of the results. In fact, it is possible that some day man will so well understand all the forces of nature by which he is affected that he may control them, as he does electricity, or adapt himself as he does to the force of gravity.

EXTREME CHANGES DUE

The year 1931 will be marked by extreme changes, affecting taxation, tariff and prohibition, among other things; sweeping reforms in connection with the stock market, politics, institutions and developments of public resources; great, progressive events in governmental, economic and scientific affairs; and a fearful disaster in the fall. The trend of business will be uneven, with several periods of recession, for the trying conditions—due to Saturn, the planet of restrictions; Uranus, the planet of upheaval and radical changes, and Jupiter, the planet of expansion, all in bad aspect—are not over; but there are many bright prospects throughout the year, nevertheless.

These adverse planetary influences affect the world and its family in general, but—with regard to financial conditions especially—the United States is not likely to be as detrimentally affected in 1931 as it was in 1930, because the planets are moving away from the positions of the Sun, Venus and Jupiter in the financial section of the horoscope of this country.

In other words, we should be the first to recover from world-wide depression because we will not "tune in" on the inharmonious vibrations so frequently as in the past year.

Any President, regardless of personality or party, must have suffered unpopularity during 1930, while Saturn afflicted the Sun in the chart of the U. S.; and it is probable that any President would have been extremely conservative and slow to action under the same influence. That depressing aspect will wane after December 26. But Uranus will continue to afflict the Sun until February 21, indicating the continuation of friction and lack of co-operation in Congress, or between Congress and the President, for a time. In fact, as the disruptive Uranus and the reflective Saturn are squared for battle in the heavens, while, until late in January 1932, Uranus will oppose the position of Saturn in the U. S. chart, there will be unusual and exciting upheaval and radical changes in Congress until about February, 1932.

Ancient astrologers propounded the aphorism: "When planets are opposed, that one in elevation will be the victor."

In this case, Uranus will be in elevation. The "old order of things" represented by Saturn, must give way.

NEW POLITICAL PARTIES

Whether or not the "Republican" and "Democratic" party names will be retained, there will be, in effect, two different parties in Congress—the "Liberals" and the "Conservatives."

Also, there will be radical changes—tending to overthrow restrictive policies—affecting prohibition, tariff regulations, international commerce, and naval affairs.

In a way, conditions are similar to those of the time when it was decided to have "Government of the People, by the People"; so there may be government control of the distribution of liquor, or of public utilities.

JANUARY

Between Dec. 29 and Jan. 4, Mars, planet of quick action, will be in good aspect with the planet of solidity, labor and construction, Saturn, probably signifying the promotion of definite action in relief measures, and building projects, developed during December. There should be similar conditions early in May, for the same aspect will be re-formed.

From the 2d to the 11th Jupiter will be in bad aspect with Saturn, indicating that there may be trying delays and obstructive difficulties tending to retard business progress, probably due to problems affecting taxation, revenue, legal affairs, or foreign policies; or possibly because of business and bank failures. In the stock-market there may be a mood of "watchful waiting"; it may be incidental to the action, however, or quite unfairly with regard to business orts or news of dividends, as it probable that, in the case the majority of good stocks, bottom" prices had been d before Christmas. Places tertainment and instruction, es, hotels and schools are y to be adversely affected. for the time being.

However, from the 12th to the 3d Mars will be in good aspect with Uranus, which may signify quick, aggressive action to promote a much improved outlook. Business in general should be stimulated, and there may be special benefits through the things "ruled" by these planets—engineering projects, electricity, electrical apparatus, the radio, aviation, the automobile industry, transportation and communication on a large scale, big advertising enterprises, also mechanical apparatus, implements, tools, machinery and construction materials. Some new invention of public benefit may be developed, too. And an exciting, liberating, progressive change affecting the public's freedom of action is likely.

FEBRUARY

Between January 25 and February 4, Jupiter, the planet of expansion, will pass over the sun, in the financial house of the United States, denoting a tendency toward more liberal policies in connection with public resources and expenditures, especially for improvements of property, farms, land and waterways.

It is in this period, however, and until February 21, that Uranus afflicts the United States sun and forms a bad aspect with Jupiter in the heavens, indicating much trouble for the government, costly dissension and upheaval; and there may be trying times due to the elements—floods, storms or other disturbances; and much sickness, causing public concern. Other countries are likely to be in great distress, also, from the same causes, and through revolutions.

MARCH

From the 10th until the middle of July Neptune will be in good aspect with Venus, as it has been, off and on, during the last two years, signifying that there are likely to be further developments and marked improvements in television, which will be used for practical, instructive and commercial purposes, as well as being developed along artistic and entertainment lines. It is probable that new industries will spring up, giving employment to thousands. The motion picture industry should benefit by this influence, too, as should commercial art. It is this influence that has been causing manufacturers to beautify merchandise, making even the most common commodities—as kitchen ware—more colorful; and advertisers will more and more appeal to the luxurious and aesthetic tastes of the public. The influence will favorably promote new style, and many more attractive uses for cotton and synthetic materials.

There are likely to be numerous developments for improvement of health conditions, also—in connection with food, hospitals, laboratories, and charitable organizations. It is probable that great reforms will be undertaken in connection with these, and other public institutions. It is doubtful that this "ideal prostate stage" can be greatly benefited by the subtle, illusive Neptune, however; on the "progressed" Venus will continue in bad aspect with the "solid" Saturn through the greater part of 1931.

A great many harmonious aspects will be formed among the planets in the heavens during the month, so the general trend in business and material affairs should be upward.

APRIL

From March 30 to April 18 there will be bad aspects of Uranus and Saturn again, and, in this period, Jupiter will once more pass over the sun in that angle which affects finances and expenditures, indicating somewhat similar conditions to those of late January and early February. Conditions in Congress are likely to be turbulent, and there may be great agitation in connection with prohibition, tariff, revenue and foreign policies; also in connection with the stock market investigations and radical changes in methods of management are likely.

But, during the latter part of the month, the progressive influence of Mars in good aspect with Uranus will be repeated, too, favoring another period of business stimulation, and radical changes directly affecting public activities. Again there may be special benefits through transportation and communication enterprises, or new inventions.

MAY

The trend during this month is very uneven; yet the general indications are that there should be business expansion in practically all industries, probably especially through building projects, real estate, agriculture, and through machinery, tools and constructive materials, for the good influences of Mars and Saturn will be operative again.

JUNE

Beginning late in May and continuing through June, Uranus will transit in good aspect with the place of the moon, denoting the probability of remarkable developments in Government affairs—drastic, but progressive changes. The physical, material and financial welfare of the country is likely to be advanced through new methods; and there may be agitation in connection with public ownership of resources or utilities, or through radical changes in systems of distribution. For a time there may be much excitement, upheaval and uncertainty tending to retard business progress, and many adaptations may be necessary before the outcome can be obviously beneficial. The aspect will be twice repeated during the ensuing year, and effects are likely to be of long duration.

JULY

Planetary influences will be fairly favorable for general business affairs during the early and latter parts of the month; but between the 10th and 21st the influences are complex, apparently good for construction, but unfavorable otherwise.

From the 22d to the first of August the newspapers are likely to have a very busy time, for the combined influences of Mercury, Nature's messenger, Mars, the exciting force, and the chaotic, confusing, entangling Neptune, will be powerful. Disclosures of intrigue, deceptive conditions and scandalous manipulations affecting public weal are probable. Members of Congress may be involved. Stock market methods may be under investigation. And there are likely to be peculiar discoveries or developments in connection with naval affairs, government institutions, public resources and utilities. The amazement world may be adversely affected, also. Yet the public should benefit as the result of having subtle, insidious conditions brought to light. And because of some health disturbance affecting many, a discovery of great benefit to all humanity may be made.

AUGUST

There may be excessive expenditure during the first 10 days of this month, or losses through accidents, wasteful policies, the elements, or through foreign affairs. There will be much more favorable conditions during the middle of the month, especially for aviation, transportation and communication industries, and for amusement enterprises. But during the last part of the month disagreeably exciting, martial, destructive or accidental conditions may prevail.

SEPTEMBER

The good aspect of Uranus and the Moon will be exact again between Aug. 25 and Sept. 27, denoting further progressive developments in affairs promoted or originating in May and June; and science may take a great stride forward.

Between Sept. 11 and Oct. 11 (the influence probably extending over a longer period) Neptune will transit in good aspect with Jupiter, indicating expansion in business, professional, legal and diplomatic affairs, or unusual developments, mergers and great activity in the stock market. And there may be gains through agriculture, public utilities, shipping, development of waterways, things of the sea and liquids.

OCTOBER

Although Jupiter and Uranus, in powerfully good aspect in the heavens between October 7 and 15, do not strike responsive chords in the U. S. chart, so that the vibration may not be particularly favorable to this country, yet the world in general should be beneficially affected by the influence, which is favorable for the promotion of new business undertakings, legal, diplomatic and professional affairs, banking interests, scientific projects, and aviation.

The New Moon, which occurs on the 11th of October, will eclipse the Sun (there having been eclipses in April and September, too), and the chart drawn for Washington at the time of this eclipse is a very martial, threatening one, indicating disaster affecting this country, as well as others, and causing heavy damages and expenditures during this month, partly due to Nature's violence. At the same time, or during the middle of the month, Mars and Jupiter will be in adverse aspect with the U. S. Moon, denoting much trouble for the government and country generally, and that the public may suffer great discomfort. We will be fortunate if we escape a national calamity.

There will be many construction enterprises, however, probably in repairing or building new ships, dams, bridges, tunnels, factories, and so on.

Late in the month there will be fortunate Neptune vibrations, indicating marked improvements, reforms and a peaceful trend; or there may be benefits through Neptunian things—things of the sea, shipping, gases, oils; or through huge combines. Or the benefits may be more subtle, coming about through mass psychology, inspirational or spiritual developments. Neptune is said to "rule" the stock market, too; but it is doubtful whether the good aspect of Mars and Neptune could bring great or lasting gains through this source, as they were in bad aspect when the U. S. originated.

NOVEMBER

The trend of this month appears to be very uneven. Conditions affecting us with or through other countries, and through the elements, may continue to be paramount; and political conditions are likely to be tense, having a disturbing effect upon business developments. Very radical changes in government policies are likely, for Uranus will once more pass in opposition to Saturn, and the battle to overthrow limitations may be waged through the rest of the fall and the early winter months.

Early in November, however, Jupiter will transit in good aspect with Mars, indicating liberal and constructive expenditure for public benefit and for development of this country's resources.

About the 11th or 12th there may be bad accidents; and throughout the fall there are likely to be unstable states of affairs, strain and tension, if not great upheaval, in connection with foreign relations.

Between the 18th and 24th, however, some adjustment or development of great benefit to the United States is probable.

DECEMBER

On the 1st and 2d Mars will afflict Neptune, indicating that there may be disasters at sea; and much confusion, possibly a panic, in the stock-market. Or there may be distressing scandals. And the general trend of the month is not good.

1932 AND 1933 GOOD

It will take some time to rise to the high peak of prosperity enjoyed in 1928; but a big "boom" should get well under way in the fall of 1932; and 1933 promises to be a banner year.

Sheldon in Court Today in Kidnaping

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (US)—While authorities continue search for his asserted pals in connection with the Zeke Carew kidnaping, Ralph Sheldon, reputed ex-Chicago gang leader, will be arraigned today on three charges of assault to commit murder.

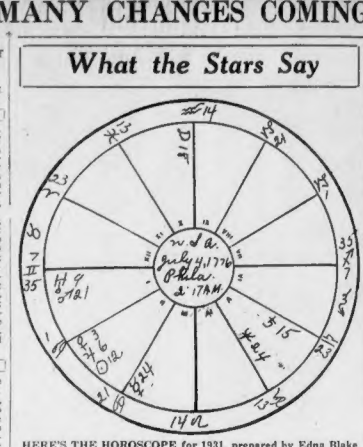
Sheldon, now held under $100,000 bail, was arrested two weeks ago following a gun battle with Long Beach police, who stopped him and several companions in an automobile on a gambling barge pier there.

Harding Allen Left Estate of $424,895

Worcester, Jan. 2—Harding Allen, Barre banker and manufacturer and leading manufacturer in this part of the State, left an estate of $424,895.07, according to an inventory filed in Probate Court by Worcester Bank and Trust Company and Attorney Willis E. Sibley, executors of his will.

His personal property is inventoried at $377,895.07 and his realty was appraised at $46,900.

What the Stars Say



HERE'S THE HOROSCOPE for 1931, prepared by Edna Blake Hald, noted astrologer, who sees many changes forthcoming.

RESERVE BOARD BLAMED FOR SLUMP

Washington, Jan. 2 (US)—Blame for the business depression is laid to the federal reserve board by Rep. Louis T. McFadden (R.) of Pennsylvania.

McFadden, who is chairman of the House banking and currency committee, said the board, shortly after the advent of the Hoover administration, embarked on a policy of deflation, resulting in "one of the most serious deflations both in the price of securities and commodities that has ever been known."

Now the board has changed this policy to one of inflation through lowering the rediscount rate to two per cent, he said.

CITES CONFERENCES

Cheap money for stock market speculation, bond buying and loans to foreign countries, may be available as a result of the present "cheap money" policy, McFadden predicted.

This new policy apparently is the result of recent conferences held abroad, when Governor Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, conferred in London, Paris and Berlin with the central banks of Europe, McFadden said, continuing:

"This plan is intended to make money and credit cheap through the lowering of the discount rate to two per cent and the application of open market operations and that of purchase of the three greatest powers at the command of the federal reserve system.

"The public is instructed to believe that cheap money will stimulate industry, which will result in the increase of employment and purchasing power.

SURPLUSES STILL EXIST

"In this connection, however, there are still with us indications of surpluses, and industry and commerce are struggling with these surpluses. There are no indications that business and industry are short of the necessary working capital.

"Money is said to be easy, but we must recognize the fact that it is easy for those of large financial strength, who at the present have no need to borrow. Rates of interest are low only on the highest grade of securities.

"If credit, therefore, is released because of this change of Federal Reserve policy in making money cheap, it will be used in speculation in the stock market or else it will be used in the bond market.

"Might it be that we are on the eve of the creation of an easy money market for the purpose of again making large foreign loans?

"If so, this will probably result in large shipments of gold abroad, and may be fraught with the same dangers of the change of policy in July, 1927, which terminated in the subsequent orgy of speculation of which we are now so sadly aware."

SET LOCKS HOLD UP BANK PROBE

Chicago, Jan. 2 (INS)—Time locks, set so they will not open until 72 hours have passed, today delayed investigation of the story of bank robbery and abduction told by John C. Malloy, assistant cashier of the Lawrence avenue National Bank.

Business at the bank was ordered suspended by national bank examiners denying the inquiry. Between $10,000 and $12,000 was said to have been taken.

Malloy's story is that four men, representing themselves as bank examiners, entered the bank when he was ther alone yesterday, compelled him to open the safety deposit vault, which they looted, and then kidnaped him. He was taken to Milwaukee and released, he said.

The locks on the vault apparently were set by the bandits for the 72-hour period.

Rockne Gets $25,000 Offer as Journalist

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP)—Worries never cease for Knute Rockne. All that was worrying the Notre Dame football coach today, after emerging from his overhauling at the Mayo Brothers Clinic at Rochester, Minn., was decision to accept or reject an offer of $25,000 a year to become a journalist.

Rival Chicago newspapers were reported bidding for Rockne's journalistic services. Under the terms offered him, his work would not interfere with his coaching activity.

JAMAICA PLAIN GIRL MISSING

A plea for aid in finding their daughter, Mary E. Gibbons, 14, who has been missing from home eight days, has been sent to the Boston Evening American by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gibbons of Mozart st., Jamaica Plain.

The girl left home on Christmas day to go to a theater and no word has been received from her since.

Mary E. Gibbons

The girl is described as being 5 feet 5 inches in height and tight complexion. When last seen she wore a dark hat, blue jersey knit dress, fawn colored stockings, low cut, wine colored shoes with high heels, and a black coat with black fur collar and cuffs.

The world-famous British Museum and other museums in Europe and America can now boast of a few interesting and strange examples of art from the African jungles. Read about the skill of the tribesmen from the dark continent in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

GIRL HUNTED AT CUNARD DOCK

Worcester, Jan. 2—When the liner Mauretania docks in New York tomorrow, police will be in the crowd searching for Barbara Bramwell Buffum of Oxford, who escaped from the Worcester State Hospital two weeks ago.

On the Mauretania is believed to be Wilton Bramwell, who had been described on wedding invitations sent out by the girl as a baronet, but whose job is a clerk aboard ship. Police are of the opinion that Barbara would be at the dock to greet her husband.

State Detectives Edward J. McCarthy went to Webster to continue his search for clues that may help locate the girl.

O. K. of New Ferry to Havana Sought

Washington, Jan. 2 (INS)—The Florida East Coast Railroad today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to establish a car ferry service between New Orleans and Havana. The ferries operating in each direction will touch at Key West, Fla., when necessity or convenience requires.

U. S. Bars 'Brains' of Nicaraguan Revolt

Los Angeles, Jan. 2—Col. Augustin F. Marti, the military genius behind the Sandino rebellion in Nicaragua, found himself today in reality "a man without a country." Col. Marti, here from San Salvador, was denied admission.

LINGLE DEATH SUSPECT HELD

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP)—Suspected of complicity in the slaying of Jake Lingle, Tribune crime reporter, Leo Loeffler, reputed St. Louis gangster, is held for questioning at a hotel, according to the Daily News.

Loeffler is reported to have been handed over to state's attorney's detectives on a tip from an ally of Al Capone, 13 days ago. He has been under questioning in a carefully guarded hotel suite, where a dozen or more witnesses are reported to have tentatively identified him as seen at the place of Lingle's murder. Loeffler steadfastly denies knowledge of the crime.

Havana Bars Film on Protest by Chinese

Havana, Jan. 2 (AP)—The Spanish language version of a film, "East Is West," was barred today from Cuban Theaters on order of the Department of the Interior. The Chinese consulate protested that it gave the wrong impression of the Chinese people.

Milton Woman's Club to Dedicate Clubhouse

By NANCY BREWSTER

A proud president Mrs. Edward M. Cox will be tonight when the Milton Woman's Club formally dedicates their clubhouse, the completion of which was realized during Mrs. Cox's term of office.

Every woman's club anticipates the possession of a clubhouse and when the doors of the Reesdale st. building are opened tonight for inspection by members and friends, another achievement will be chalked up for the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs with which the Milton group is affiliated.

RECEPTION AND CONCERT

Four hundred women engage in the activities of this club, their good causes including every available kind of communal and civic philanthropy.

A program of addresses and music, followed by a reception and inspection of the building has been arranged by the special committee in charge. On the occasion which are to begin in the auditorium at 8:30 p. m., following a half hour concert by the mandolin club, have been invited Judge Kenneth D. Johnson, chairman of the selectmen of the town; Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy, minister of the First Parish Church; Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, state president of the Federation and past president of the Milton Woman's Club.

The club plans for the future will be outlined by Mrs. W. W. Churchill. At the conclusion of the exercises, Mrs. Cox has arranged a special treat in that the kiddling of the first fire on the hearth in the parlor of the clubhouse will be done by Miss Isabella Whittier, donor of the room's furnishings.

ON COMMITTEE

In charge of the dedicatory exercises are Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Philip Y. De Normandie, Miss Josephine Griffith, Mrs. Carleton A. Rowe and Mrs. A. H. Davison.

Mrs. Cox has appointed the following woman to have general oversight of the clubhouse after the opening: Mrs. Thomas F. White, chairman; Mrs. Birgir Nilsson, Mrs. Frank H. Eastman, Mrs. Reuben Gleason, Jr., Mrs. Alfred Beck, Jr., Mrs. Charles C. Gilman, Mrs. Francis Bates, Mrs. Ernest C. Nickerson and Mrs. John L. Williams.

Organists' Club Plans Meeting in Melrose Tuesday

The Women Organists' Club of Boston will meet next Tuesday at the Methodist Church, Main st., Melrose, at 10:30 a. m., Mrs F. Martin del Castillo announces. Miss Doris Sandford will play several organ selections as will Mrs. Gertrude Frase.

The Children's Hospital, disabled veterans and music are the three chief concerns of the 47 members who comprise the membership of this club. Organized in 1924, it affiliated itself with the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs a year later and in 1928 with the General Federation. The president of the club is music chairman for the General Federation.

Legislation to Be Discussed at Committee Tea

The legislative committee of the National Civic Federation will sponsor a meeting tea at the Copley-Plaza Monday, Jan. 12 at 2 o'clock, presenting five state bills for consideration.

Mrs. Joseph W. Attwill, legislative chairman, will present the measures: An act to promote the cure, alleviation and prevention of rheumatism, a bill for amending the present automobile insurance law; one of the bills from the recommendations of the commission on the laws relative to children; the pre-primary convention bill and the doctors' bill to clarify the law.

One Federal measure on immigration will be discussed. Speakers will present arguments on both sides of the various bills, thus giving the women ample opportunity to be well informed on the measure before taking action.

N. E. Women's Club to Hear Lecture on Spain's Trials

At the regular meeting of the New England Women's Club, next Monday, in the Crystal Room of the Hotel Kenmore, Charles C. Batchelder will speak on "King or Republic in Spain." The current history committee, of which Mrs. Charles Holyoke is the chairman, is in charge.

A social hour will follow with Miss A. L. Andrews, Mrs. John H. Field, Jr., Mrs. Franklin Smith and Mrs. H. Nielson Tucker as hostesses.

Tips on Budgets at Information Center Exhibit

To assist homemakers in planning their budgets for 1931, the Boston Home Information Center has arranged in co-operation with Miss S. Agnes Donham, income management specialist, a free exhibit at the center headquarters, 87 Beacon st.

The exhibit will open at the Beacon st. headquarters next Monday, continuing through Jan. 17, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. At 3 o'clock each day of the first week, Miss Donham will explain the exhibit. Charts with real budgets of families at different income levels will be included.

Beginning Jan. 14, Miss Donham will give a course of three Wednesday afternoon lectures at the center on "Families, Peace and Pocketbooks." Announcement of these talks is made by the director of the Boston Home Information Center, Mrs. Louise P. Skilton.

Choose a Compact With Finesse

By ANN ARDEN

MISGUIDED maiden aunts who still believe in buxom puffs for themselves often present very sleek, small and modern compacts to the nieces who they know couldn't do without them.

• • •

YET WHAT errors are often committed in generosity's name. For how can anyone without a "compact" frame of mind, bestow upon a fussy young friend a really perfect compact?

• • •

YOU CAN see that this is going to be a plea for more care in selecting compacts. Fussy young friends, even judging from their quick selections over counters), often make mistakes. And the correct that it is or should be, one's "pick-up" half a dozen times a day, should be shopped for with finesse.

Wake Up, Ex-Canadian Soldiers, Says Veteran

Editor Boston American:

Where do some people get the idea that Canada paid her soldiers such a bonus as R. W. Garrison stated? She paid $600 to married men with 4 years; single men with 4 years got $420; married men, 3 years, $500; single men, $350; married men, 2 years, $400; single men, $280.

One year married, $400; single men, $280, and they had to serve in France to get this. But what has she done for the thousands of her soldiers who are in the United States, and who need medical care? Nothing! Wake up, you ex-Canadian soldiers.

Snooping Use of X-Ray Is Protested

Editor Boston American:

Must everything be known? We hope not, but this item in the papers about X-ray showing the sex of the unborn is unnecessary. Let us wait for some things without calling in science and mechanism to reveal what will be known at the proper time, but not until then. There is poetry about not knowing the sex of the unborn till a reasonable time. Science should not poke its nose into every secret. Much more, there is nothing gained except a scoop for the laboratories.

If they want to use X-rays in other searchings, let them use a large X-ray equipment and let us know what heaven is like. A child using me the question a short time ago, but I was floored. If they can use this X-ray to find out what the other place is in contrast to heaven, it might be a good check upon some criminals. The fact is today we know too much and that makes many people miserable and hard to get along with.

Claims Rich Poultry Fanciers Take Prizes

Editor Boston American:

A visit to the Boston Poultry Show will be a treat to many but I hope all those who visit it will keep track, and see if the prize birds don't come from the farms of the idle rich who keep chickens for a hobby. They never make a dollar in it and no one is now.

The poultry industry has gone to smash and only a strong leadership by hard working poultry farmers will bring it back. We do not need the so-called efficiency experts from the colleges to tell us how to run our business to put this country back on a sound basis. People who go into keeping chickens this spring will find themselves soon in bankruptcy. Steer clear of the "Chicken Business" this spring and wait till it gets readjusted. I speak as I have had over 20 years experience.

Ex-Bostonian Attacks Stand of Telephone Co.

Editor Boston American:

As a native of Boston I am amazed at the lack of militant editorial comment which the Boston newspapers have taken in the action of the telephone company officials in openly and most defiantly contravening the Constitutional rights of your readers.

Is it possible that those charged with the management of your publication are not conversant with the Constitution of our country, or, have they forgotten the valiant and successful fight made by John Quincy Adams a citizen of Massachusetts, to retain the Right of Petition?

The right of a public utility to discharge one of its employes is conceded by everyone. The right of a public utility to deny to its employes the rights of citizens is denied by the Constitution of the United States. The action of the telephone company in setting itself up as one which is not subject to the Constitution of the United States surely should be of interest to you.

The right of a public utility corporation to set aside the constitutional guarantees of our people and to say to its employes in effect, that no employe of such a corporation shall hold membership in any civic, fraternal or religious organization which may petition the government for a redress of grievances is of vast importance to all those who still cherish the right of freedom and the hope of retaining a free government.

In reading your valuable publication I note that those effected by this illegal and most unmoral decision of the Telephone Co. have voted to petition the United States Senate for an investigation of the telephone Co. This action is most distressing to those familiar with the earlier history and traditions of our state. Such an action indicates a lack of confidence in the Legislature of Massachusetts.

Why is it that this momentous decision has been taken without the slightest editorial comment on the part of the Boston papers?

This letter is not written in any spirit of criticism nor for the purpose of creating further discord. My hope is that through the intervention of your powerful publication that the constitutional guarantees of our people may be maintained and that we shall continue to be a people governed by law and not by men in powerful position—dictators.

Says Bonus Payment Will Help 20,000,000

Editor Boston American:

This $3,000,000,000, or approximately $2,700,000,000 if passed by Congress, and I have every reason to believe now it will become a law, for immediate payment of the face value of the adjusted service compensation certificates, will be expended in 48 states of the union.

It will go directly to service men and their families and will affect directly approximately 20,000,000 people out of the 120,000,000 people in the United States. Mr. Mellon, in a statement a few days ago, came out in opposition to payment of this adjusted compensation at this time. This, in spite of the fact that he has asked authority to borrow $8,000,000,000 with the low rates of interest at which the government can borrow money today, and then he practically tells the American people that to expend $2,700,000,000 which will go to the service men and their families in the United States would be a serious blow to the finances of the country.

I know thousands of these men are unemployed as many of them are losing their homes and farms and many of them have not worked for 12 months.

Many veterans with steady jobs do not seem to care about others who are down and out, and I know there are many of them.

So veterans wherever the Boston American reaches and may veterans that read it write to your Congressmen and Senators and tell them to ask them to favor this Wright-Putman bill at once. I will gladly tell all veterans who their Congressmen and Senators are if you do not happen to know.

ARTHUR PEABODY.

Lynn Man Attacks Legion for Bonus Stand

Editor Boston American:

It is without a doubt that most of you about the New England states have read the publication that the Hon. Willis C. Hawley has recently submitted to the press.

It can be easily interpreted that after Mr. Hawley's public statement to the effect that he is standing by the American Legion convention at Boston, and "we've been working with the Legion all the way through and so far it has presented nothing of this nature," and immediately states in other words his committee is controlled by the American Legion.

Hawley's statement at this time has put the Legion in a box barrage, and the Legion has now got to act quick if it intends to act, for the majority of the posts about the country are sending in petitions to Congress in favor of the immediate payment, and 90 per cent of the rank and file of the Legion are fighting in every way for the immediate payment.

Should Congress turn down the proposed bill providing for an immediate settlement of the full face value of the certificates—watch the reaction.

In a few simple words Hawley has told the rank and file of the American Legion that does not represent 20 per cent of the World War veterans, that the American Legion by politics, controls representation of the World War veterans' legislation in Washington, and has told the World War veterans what they may expect in the way of legislation if the Legion is opposed to the enactment of the law.

You veterans of the Legion surely know who the opposers are and if you do not use your heads, if the immediate payment of the full face value is turned down by Congress, you deserve what you get.

In another publication by Hon. Walter C. Johnson condemning an organization known as the United Veterans Aid Assn., Inc., which is officially on record with the United States Congress, and is submitting a national initiative petition to the public, each having an opportunity to read the resolution covering the intent and purpose of the petition before signing, I am afraid that Congressman Johnson has bit off more than he will be able to chew. Mr. Johnson does not mention the name of the organization, and—why?

I am not a member of the organization, although I am in correspondence with the national secretary of the same, and have one of the petitions at hand.

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR BUSINESS, SAYS PROCTER

A return to normal business before the end of 1931 was predicted today by Col. William Cooper Procter chairman of the board of directors of the Procter & Gamble Co., in his annual talk to sales representatives in Hotel Statler.

The novel means of "talkies" was used to convey his message, bringing him to Boston on the silver screen for his "personal" talk on account of simultaneous meetings held in other cities.

"There is no promise of anything in the nature of a boom, nor do I believe we want a boom condition," Col. Procter said.

"We can, however, look forward to a gradual approach to normal business, which should be attained some time during 1931.

"The revival of business should not and cannot be forced; it must come about naturally," he said.

STRESSES FAIR DEALING.

Col. Procter emphasized the company's policy for fair dealing with the trade and the public and fair dealing among those employed by the company.

Organization and planning he stressed as the factors that made it possible to accomplish projects in 1930 which many people would have said were impossible.

The company has reached unquestioned leadership as manufacturers of soaps and cooking fats in the United States, Canada and England, he said, and added that it was his purpose to strive for a new kind of leadership in the more intangible field of human relations.

"I refer to the policy of regularized employment and profit-sharing that should always exist between a manufacturing organization and its co-workers," he said.

IMPORTANCE OF RETAILER.

In discussing plans for 1931, Richard R. Deupree, president and general manager, emphasized the importance of the retail dealer in coordinating various advertising activities. The dealer, according to Deupree, has the final say in effecting the interest of the ultimate consumer in the product.

The meeting here was in charge of District Manager A. M. Wood, who outlined the 1931 sales and advertising plans in detail. Those attending were:

APPROVAL FOR RAIL MERGER EXPECTED

Washington, Jan. 2 (US)—President Hoover's plan of consolidating eastern railroads into four great systems appeared today to have excellentprospect s of approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission despite any opposition in Congress.

Close study of the merger proposal showed that it follows in many details the five-system plan advocated by the Interstate Commerce Commission last year. While the new plan has yet to be placed formally before the commission, heads of the railroads involved have revealed that this will be done without delay.

CAUSED G. O. P. BREAK

Meanwhile President Hoover's advocacy of the merger threatened to provoke a major political issue which may thrust itself along with the power issue into the 1932 presidential campaign. Already it has caused a break in Republican ranks.

The chief executive has been sharply criticized by Senator Cousens for announcing his approval of the plan in advance of consideration by the Interstate Commerce Commission and warmly defended by Senator Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee.

Cousens takes the view that the consolidations are more in the interest of the stockholders than they are in the public interest. The Michigan senator, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee, has indicated his purpose to oppose the consolidations to the limit.

OPPOSITION DEVELOPING

He will get some support from Republican insurgents in the Senate but the general opinion in Congress is believed favorable to letting the Interstate Commerce Commission settle the question without outside interference.

Some opposition is developing to the allocation of the smallest roads under the detailed merger plans which were announced by the railroad executives in New York. This is especially true of the proposal to give control of the Western Maryland to the Baltimore & Ohio and to split control of the Virginian between the Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate, the latter of which is dominated by the Van Sweringens.

SIMPSON GIVEN LIE BY FARM BOARD HEAD

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Chairman Legge of the farm board, today declared "absolutely untrue" statements concerning him made recently by John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers Education and Co-Operative Union of Oklahoma City.

Simpson charged the farm chairman had told the senate agriculture committee his board had sought to depress wheat prices.

"It would be highly improper for me to enter into any discussion of what was said in an executive session of a senate committee," said Legge, "but I do want to repeat most emphatically that the statements you have been using as having been made by me at this hearing are absolutely untrue.

"So far as I know no resolution has been introduced in Congress asking for an investigation of the farm board, but I have been informed that the private traders in grain and cotton have been trying to have such a resolution introduced. Do you wish to place yourself in the position of supporting their activities?"

Special Guard on Viceroy of India

Calcutta, Bengal, Jan. 2 (AP)—Extreme precautions were taken today to prevent harm befalling Viceroy of India Lord Irwin and Lady Irwin as they drove in state to the Howrah railway station to take a train for Assam.

Owners of houses along the route were made responsible by police for seeing that no strangers or servants were given access to windows or balconies overlooking the street until the procession had passed.

Land Grant College Get on Pay Basis

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP)—Although set up originally to give young America free institutions of higher learning, the land grant colleges, the Federal Office of Education said today, for since have abandoned this policy." The burden of costs is being "shifted to the students and colleges rely more and more on fees for income," it was said. Students' fees rose from $3,545,038 in 1915 to $15,388,563 in 1928, approximately 12 per cent of the total income.

The bequest of $100,000 for combatting the modern feminist movement, which was contained in the will of former Atty-Gen. Albert E. Pillsbury, was classed as a blunder today by Traffic Commissioner Conry.

Such a sum would be better spent in development of women's activity in the social scheme, the commissioner declared in an address before the law observance committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs at the Y. W. C. A.

"Women's part in the administration of the affairs of life is so well determined that efforts to upset this condition must meet with failure," he said.

Pillsbury left the money to Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Columbia Universities, "believing that the modern feminist movement tends to take woman out of the home and put her in politics, government or business and that this already has begun to impair the family."

"A better disposition of this money would have been to place the same in trust, the income to be expended by women in developing law observance to a higher degree.

"One of the greatest traffic problems that Boston must meet is the handling of pedestrians in the shopping district. The overwhelming proportion of the shopping population is made up of women, who are instinctively in favor of observing the law.

"Thoughtless women ignore traffic signals and invite accident by stepping from the sidewalk into the street regardless of moving automobiles.

"Women observers stationed at various points in the shopping district could aid in law observance by instructing women in traffic signals and how to cross a street without danger."

WEEKS FIGHTS TAX INCREASE

Assurance that he would strive to prevent an increase in the tax rate this year, in spite of the constantly increasing expenditures for unemployment relief, was given by Mayor Sinclair Weeks in his annual address yesterday at the first meeting of the 1931 Newton Board of Aldermen.

Under normal conditions, the mayor said, the city government could hope to effect a reduction in the rate, but with the necessity of providing as much work as possible, "the best we can do is to keep the rate down." Last year's rate was $27.20.

Mayor Weeks indicated that the actual work of constructing a new City Hall and war memorial building would be started soon and that he would recommend the appropriation of $750,000, which the Legislature has authorized the city to borrow for the purpose. He also recommended that the city acquire land on Chestnut st., Waban, as the site for another junior high school.

Guard, 75, Irate at Being Called 'Kid,' Routs Gunman

Minneapolis, Jan. 2 (AP)—August Brunn, night watchman, didn't mind being held up. What he objected to was being called a "kid."

Brunn was making the rounds of the junk yards he guards last night when a youth poked a pistol at him.

"He says to me, 'I'll take your money, Kid,'" Brunn told police. "And me a man 75 years old. It made me mad. I just grabbed him and we wrestled. I got the gun and he ran away. I'll bet he'll be more careful who he calls a kid after this."

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By JAMES J. DELANEY

With an outlook of optimism, 1931 work began today, to further advance the Port of Boston to a higher position as one of the world's leading commercial centers.

Boston as a fishing port has exceeded itself in total output by 10,000,000 pounds, establishing a new yearly record for 1930, with a quarter of a billion pounds of fish landed here.

Foreign commerce figures are favorable in view of general world-wide business conditions.

For the first time, Boston has been made the terminus for West Indies cruises, which loom up as being one of the most important features of the port during 1931.

Boston is the terminus for nearly every important steamship line in the world and connections are available with all parts of the world.

FOREIGN SHIPS

Bringing thousands of tons of merchandise worth millions of dollars, 1439 steamers, 219 schooners and 9 airplanes, rated as merchant vessels, came to this port from foreign countries in 1930. These ships were from every port on the globe.

AMERICAN REGISTRY

American registry ships coming into the Port of Boston are a feature of the 1930 statistics. Out of a total of 1439 steamers, 652 flew the flag of the United States. This is second only to British shipping. Ships of 13 different nations came here during the past year.

PASSENGERS CARRIED

Passengers carried into the Port of Boston in 1930 totaled 54,763, which included 12,000 from overseas, 40,791 from Canadian ports, 1448 from Newfoundland and 519 from the West Indies, Central and South America.

FOREIGN IMPORTS

Boston will rank second to New York in foreign imports, it has been stated by authorities, although figures were not yet ready. Exports showed a decline. Port authorities are now working to remedy this condition. A change in existing rates in 1931 is hoped for, so that Boston may again take its former place as an export center. A drop in grain exportation of 1,000,000 bushels is shown by statistics for 1930. Nearly 2,000,000 bushels were exported as against 3,000,000 in 1929.

OPENING MARKET

As the fish market opened today, a paucity of groundfish was evidenced in receipts at the Fish Pier. Only one vessel came with the early arrivals to meet the market. The fleet of the Bay State fishing fleet has the distinction of being the first 1931 arrival. Thirteen days' fishing brought her only 35,000 pounds. Captain Roy Martin stated ice was scarce on the grounds. He fished off Big La Have Bank, off Nova Scotia.

QuickBiscuits to Delight Family

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over STATION WLEX

Perhaps among your New Year's resolutions was the determination to treat your family to home-made "quick - breads" more often, and when you stop to think how many delicious, tender rolls and biscuits can be made from a standard biscuit recipe, there doesn't seem any reason why we shouldn't delight the family with these treats more often, does there?

Martha Lee

For our new housekeepers, I'm going to repeat the standard biscuit recipe.

STANDARD BISCUIT RECIPE

2 cups flour
4 tbsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 to 4 tbsps. shortening
2-3 to ¾ cup milk, or half milk and half water

Mix and sift dry ingredients thoroughly. Cut the shortening into the dry materials with a silver-ware blender or two knives and then lightly work in the liquid and turn out on a floured board. Handle the biscuit just as little as possible. Pat them into a sheet about one inch thick and cut with a well-floured two-inch cutter or 1¼-inch cutter if you like them small and crusty. Or, if you add a little more liquid, you can simply drop the batter by spoonfuls into well greased muffin pans—I like the ones that are deep and narrow.

PARKER HOUSE ROLLS

This same biscuit dough can be made into delicious Parker House Rolls by kneading it well for 5 minutes, then rolling to ¼ inch thickness, brushing the sheet with melted butter and cutting out with biscuit cutter. Then folding in half, butter again on top, letting it rise for 15 minutes in a warm place and baking for 10 minutes in a hot oven at 450 F. Kneading this biscuit dough gives a fine-grained product almost like yeast bread. Tender Clover Leaf Rolls are made by rolling bits of dough between the hands to form balls and placing three in each section of a well-buttered muffin tin; and to make them extra good, put in the bottom of each muffin tin a teaspoon of melted butter and a tbsp. of brown sugar. Then when your biscuits are done and turned upside down, they will be covered with a luscious caramel syrup on which you can drop two or three pecan nut meats.

This biscuit dough will make delicious Meat-Pie Crusts, arranging your meat, gravy and vegetables in a baking dish and covering with the biscuit crust rolled to fit the top of your casserole and baked in a hot oven. Using 4 generous tablespoons of shortening, transform the biscuits into old-fashioned shortcakes, which may be baked in individual cakes, split, buttered and covered with winter fruits, such as canned raspberries or logan berries, and topped with whipped cream.

The popular Cinnamon Rolls are made from this same dough rolling it ¼ inch thick, spreading with melted butter and then sprinkling on cinnamon and sugar, mixed together, with perhaps a few currants added for good measure; roll like a jelly roll and cut off into ½ inch slices. Place cut side down in a well buttered muffin pan or baking pan, buttered well, let rise 10 minutes and bake in a hot oven, 450, for 12 minutes. Crushed maple sugar mixed with pecans can be used instead of the cinnamon and sugar.

RYE BISCUITS

Rye biscuits are made by 1 cup rye flour and cup white flour and graham biscuits ditto. For bran biscuits you will want 1 cup white flour and 1 cup bran unsifted. And for corn muffins 1 cup flour and 1 cup corn meal. For delicious cheese biscuits use less shortening and add ¼ lb. of grated American cheese, mixed lightly with the dough after the liquid is added. For nut biscuits add ½ cups chopped nuts after the liquid is added and use a little less shortening; and wonderful potato biscuits are made with 1 cup flour and 1 cup riced potatoes, cut in with the shortening.

Now will all of you who have written for biscuit recipes take this for your personal reply and before long I'll have an article on pie crusts and its variations for those who have sent in requests for this form of cookery lately.

Meanwhile, another Happy New Year to you all

Faithfully yours,

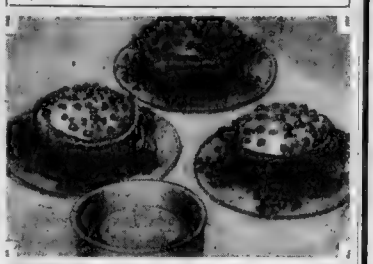
Martha Lee

To Clean Raincoat

To clean a raincoat, lay on flat surface, scrub lightly with soap and water. Rinse with clear water, do not wring, dry on coat hanger outdoors.

"Germany faces greatest crisis since the war," says Hermann Mueller, former chancellor of Germany, in his stirring article in the March of Events in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser. He is certain that all the middle parties must unite against the Hitler faction if they would preserve their government.

A Dainty Fish Dish



THIS MOLDED SALMON with cream peas bears no relationship to war-time "Gold Fish."

New Pans Add Charm to Old Delicious Dishes

Perhaps you have some one in your family who, since the war, has had a complex against "gold fish"—the canned salmon which was served early and often to Uncle Sam's army. It's entirely possible, nevertheless, to prepare this economical fish in such appetizing ways it will bring no unpleasant war-time recollections.

For instance, the illustrated recipe today shows salmon mixed with bread crumbs, milk, eggs, and seasoning and baked in the little Mary Ann bridge molds that are so attractive and popular (custard cups will do or even tea cups).

When the molded salmon is turned out after baking, the hollow center of the mold is filled with creamed peas and the addition of some fresh parsley to give contrast and color completes a most attractive and appetizing dish for luncheons, bridge parties, or Sunday night suppers.

HOW TO PREPARE IT

To prepare the molded salmon, melt 2 tbsps. butter in a saucepan and add ¼ cup of softened bread crumbs and 1 cup of milk. Cook slowly for 5 minutes then add 1½ cups cold flaked salmon (or other fish), 1 tbsp. chopped parsley, 2 eggs slightly beaten, ½ tsp. salt, a dash of pepper and ¼ tsp. of paprika.

Turn into the round or square shell pans, set in a pan of hot water and bake, until firm, in a moderate oven, 350. This will take about 30 minutes. Unmold carefully and fill the hollow center of the mold with creamed peas. Then add the parsley and serve with potato chips, French fried potatoes, or what-have-you.

These Mary Ann shell pans make the simplest dish attractive. For instance, one of our favorites at home is lemon jelly molded in these pans and the hollow center filled with custard sauce. Sometimes we whip in the beaten egg whites in the lemon gelatine and use just the yolks for the custard sauce.

In the family-sized pans, a meat loaf with mashed potatoes is truly delicious. And for the bridge party gold cakes with marshmallow cream in the center, jellied tuna fish as ad or chicken timbales.

ICE CREAM CAKES

Rice rings are especially delicious molded in these pans and served with a center of creamed vegetables.

And then there are ice cream cakes—a delicate cake baked in the individual or family-sized Mary Ann pan and then filled with ice cream and hot fudge sauce poured over all and a final sprinkling of chopped almonds or pecans. There's a luscious chocolate ice box cake and an upside-down pineapple surprise that's truly delicious.

Baked noodles, for a hearty dish, are scrumptious good mixed with eggs, milk and minced onion and baked in a moderate oven in a Mary Ann mold. Then unmold and fill with creamed shrimp or creamed ham. And then there's spiced cottage pudding with a lemon sauce, baked caramel custard and an endless variety of jellied salads, such as jellied bouillon molded with the round molds with the hollow centers filled with finely diced celery and jellied peas with French dressing.

Any of the recipes you'd like? Promptly yours on request.

CRUMB CAKE

2 cups flour
1 cup sugar
¾ cup shortening, half butter and lard
½ tsp. salt

Cream these all together well. Then take out one cup of this mixture and set aside. Add to the rest 1 egg, 1 tsp. cloves, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1 cup sour milk in which has been dissolved 1 tsp. soda. Beat well and put in pan. Sprinkle the cup you saved out over the top and bake. Add nuts and raisins if you wish.

CHAPTER 35

"TAKE IT on your feet," Mears said, tensely.

More silence

"When does the priest come?" Drake finally asked.

"Whenever you write or send him a telegram," Mayor answered him.

Suddenly Dick laughed. It was a rather high-pitched laugh. "Maybe I ought to start yelling 'Hol-mes,' he said.

"Too late now, yuh is," Jackson said. He started to sing "One More River to Cross." The bell sounded. Drake unlocked the door and Harris appeared.

"Supper for Seven," he said.

"O. K.," Drake answered.

Harris brought it over to cell seven.

"It better be a good one, I guess it's my last—"

Drake unlocked Dick's cell door. Harris set it inside and came out. Drake locked the door again.

"What did you orduh, Seven?" Jackson asked.

Cooking Soon

"Tenderloin, baked spuds, fruit cocktail, jam, bread with lots of butter, coffee with real cream—oh, yes, and mushroom soup."

Jackson smacked his big lips. "Boy!" he said. "How come you order mushroom soup? I'd never thought of it—but yuh better not eat it—may be canned."

"Shut up Sonny I got the chance to eat all I can tonight. Wish I'd thought to ask for friend turkey and stuff."

Dick began to eat. Jackson stood with his head to the grates of his door, listening to Dick eat. "Wish I had some."

"You'll get the same sort of a feed, smoke," Drake said, gruffly. "Say off—it's not up to you to remind a guy," Mears called harshly.

"Yeah? You'll be cooking soon," Drake yelled at him.

"Me, too, Mister Killer, Jackson called.

"Oh!" Dick said suddenly, "I can't eat any more—I'm feeling sick."

"Better eat," Kirby suggested

"Empty stomach is best, Kid," Mears advised.

"Ho-mes!"

"And that doesn't help any," Dick muttered

"I could eat that for you, Walters" called Mayor

"Kind of you Just for that I'll get them to let me hold your hand when I get it!"

Some of them laughed a little. That was a standard joke. It would, of course, electrocute anyone who held the hand of the man in the chair.

"They'll let me—we'll go together," Dick added.

He was trying to keep up

"Cut it out, please—say Screw gimme a light! He got the light "I'm goin' by myself in a coupla weeks. Ain't that bad enough?"

"I thought the wait here was the worst ever—but now, with about an hour to go, I'd be satisfied to stay right here."

"In the death house," Werner replied, "where they come and go——"

"Cut it, Eddie!" someone yelled. "They linger just a little time Before they give you the electric chair,

"Stop it, Eddie please not now," Dick begged.

"I have seen them come, I have seen them go,

I have heard the death warrants read,

And when I see the bright lights go dim

"For—sake, Eddie, have a heart!" Dick held his hands to his ears, trying to shut out the sound.

"When I hear the lonesome hum of the motor

That sends the high voltage to your cell,

I have a sad unexplainable sensation

Running through my breast—"

"Eddie Werner," Dick yelled, "I'm going to come back and haunt you—I will, if you don't shut up!"

"When your time grows near, less than an hour

"Now you're talkin' sense, Eddie," Kirby called out

Werner went right on

"Why do they pull that black cap over your face

And let it remain until you are dead?

"Why? Because the high voltage of electricity

Will make your eyes pop out of your head!"

"Oh, God, I'll go mad! Somebody stop him!" Dick cried.

"Drake," Mears said, "why don't you stop him?"

Stop him yourself, I like it"

Save Coffee

Mears cursed him hideously. Drake cursed back at him as he went menacingly over to Mears' cell.

"Come on, ya yaller flat-foot open up and see what I'll do to ya, ya yaller screw"

Drake turned away "Pipe down" he said as he went back to his chair.

"When the warden tightens the helmet

And places the sponge on your head——"

"Please—PLEASE cut it out, Eddie" Dick begged.

Drake laughed.

"Hol-mes!"

The bell sounded and O'Flaherty (another guard entered. They were increasing the guard. Mayor knew what this meant, as did the others.

"How do you feel, Walters?" O'Flaherty asked, kindly.

"All right, O'Flaherty, all right." That's good Better take a little sleep. Through eating? I'll save the coffee, you might want a little later."

"All r!——"

The lights dimmed down, then up, then dim again.

"Jees!" Dick muttered.

"They're playing with that thing again. Why do they have to play with it?" Mears asked. "Do they think we got no nerves?"

"We've got more nerve than anybody else," Mayor said, solemnly.

We is th' most nervous persons in th' world," Sunny Jackson called out.

The lights flickered again. Dick became jumpy. He began to curse.

"I'd rather be anywhere else than here, tonight," Mayor cried.

Me, too—ex—cept——"

"God, that got me in the pit of the stomach awful sensation" Dick confessed.

"It will get worse, Walters, it will tighten up like a cramp—I know. Fellers, this is no joke, I wish I were some other place now I'd rather be in hell. I hate like hell to be in here when a man's going to burn—I've seen two go—I'm sick already."

"You ain't the only one, Kirby." Mears said with sudden tenseness. At this point Keeper of the guards, Callahan, with Guards Peddie and Harris came in with young Italian. They stopped at cell one. Harris unlocked the door

Croaked the Cop

"Hustle in there," Peddie said, gruffly.

"What's your hurry?" demanded the newcomer.

"Mist' Callahan," Jackson called, "yuh promised me cell one, yuh did, honest. I don't like thuteen—you promised——"

"Don't bother me, I'm busy," Callahan said, harshly.

"But yuh did promise me"

Gawd, Mist Callahan, I couldn't sleep that.

"I may get a stay yet," Dick called out. "Don't be so sure, Callahan."

Callahan went out without making a reply.

"Who are you, New Guy," Mears asked

"Tom D'Amoro"

"Yes" You're the lad who croaked that cop"

"I'm the guy"

The others called out to D'Amoro in turn, telling who they were.

"Seven is Walters — Richard Walters. I'm going to burn in about an hour—get that? I'm GOING TO BURN! ! !"

"Tough," D'Amoro muttered

"Take it standing, Kid—you've shown more guts than anyone else, so far," Mears said to him.

"All right Mears—I'll take it standing I'll show 'em."

"Hol-mes!"

"What is that?" D'Amoro asked, frightened.

Guard Drake laughed.

"Eddie Werner—he's gone nuts, he got a stay."

"Gone nuts? There's a place for nuts, why don't they take him out?"

"Red tape—that's why—they'll get around to it in a month or so, after most of us have burned and he'll be raving by then," Kirby explained.

"He's a poet, makes up some, recites other stuff just wait" D'Amoro—just wait," Dick informed him. He was silent a moment and then he cursed, softly

"You're right, Mears — it gets you in the stomach, this waiting. Know what they out to do" When a guy gets his sentence they ought to take him in a trick chair right there and shoot the old juice into him have it over with."

Dick began giving away his extra cigarettes. He also gave away what money he had with him.

"No use no stay for me," he said.

"If I were you," Mears said, "I wouldn't let no witnesses in. You gotter have state witnesses but no others can come unless you say so."

"Not one, no sir I'm no side show."

"Ho-mes"

"Don't do that" D'Amoro screamed and then he cursed in his native tongue

"Quiet, Eddie,' the kindly O'Flaherty said

"It sounds like Holman," D'Amoro went on—"Holmes, was th' name of the cop I croaked God, I hadda do it—he was stickin' th' beat on me."

"What's that?"

"Shootin' at him," Mears explained to Dick.

Another guard brought a telegram for Dick It was from some distant sheriff who had come on with friends. He wanted permission to witness the execution. "Tell him I said no I saw NO," Dick screamed.

"Another request," Dick muttered.

But it was Father O'Connors He went directly to Dick's cell and O'Flaherty opened it for him 'How do you feel, Walters" it asked

"All right, Father."

"That's the spirit, boy. Are you ready for me now?"

Dick picked up the prayerbook and indicated a page

"I read up to there, Father"

"Good. Now, my son, read this."

Dick began to read:

"I confess to Almighty God, to Blessed Mary ever Virgin . . . to Blessed Michael the Archangel, Peter and Paul, and to all the saints and to you, Father, that I have sinned exceedingly in thought and word and deed, through my fault—through my fault—through my own grievous fault——"

He paused to clear his throat—it might have been that he was choking back a sob.

RECORDS BARE POWER TRUST CONSPIRACY

By M. L. RAMSAY
Universal Service

Washington, Jan. 2—Secret records were disclosed today supporting the charge of Senate insurgents that the removal of two Federal Power Commission officials in an attempt to throttle all regulation of the power companies.

These records, it was learned, will be used by leaders in building their case against Chairman George Otis Smith and Commissioners Garwood and Draper, whose confirmation as power commissioners they hope to revoke.

A sensational protest against the power trust's earlier maneuvers to hamstring the commission, made by former executive secretary O. C. Merrill, has been brought to light. This protest is in the commission's files, but was not disclosed to senatorial investigators last winter.

ATTACK ON KING

It shows that:

The power interests fought savagely against Merrill and the successive power commissioners to scrap all official regulations that were revised, and substitute an administrative plan giving them public power sites on their own terms.

Their attack on the accounting system of William V. King, removed as chief accountant by the new commission, was part and parcel of this greater fight.

Merrill himself branded at least part of the attack on King's system as in reality an assault upon the law and the commission's regulations.

He found evidence of a masked effort to break down honest accounting by state as well as federal agencies, through attempted changes in King's system.

His protest against the power companies' tactics was written after the commission had twice ruled against the companies' contentions, and four formal hearings had been held, with innumerable informal conferences.

He says in part:

CITES NEW YORK COMPANY

"The agreement reached with representatives of the association (National Electric Light Association) in May has been repudiated, and the questions reopened through the influence of Eastern representatives of the association who are not now and never will be licensees of the commission.

"The dominating influence appears to be exerted by the Consolidated Gas Company of New York."

The Consolidated Company was then in the midst of a New York State fight to boost the value of all utility property, upon which consumers would be compelled to pay rates. It was proposed to eliminate all depreciation and value on worn-out property, as though it were new.

Ultimately the federal commission overrode the power industry and retained King's depreciation accounting. But it has never been generally enforced.

Rail Payrolls Show Decrease in Year

Washington, Jan. 2 (INS)—Class I railroads reported a total of 1,454,963 employes as of the middle of October, their total compensation amounting to $213,674,715, the Interstate Commerce Commission announced today.

Compared with returns for the corresponding month of last year, the summary for October showed a decrease in the number of employes of 294,896, or 16.85 per cent, while the total compensation showed a decrease of $49,786,638, or 18.88 per cent.

JOB BOARD MOVES TO OUST WIVES, GIRLS

Cortes Asks Gracie to Marry Him

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend. ("He is no Adonis, Wilda thinks, but "he has a rare smile.") Wilda's father dies and her mother, Gracie, becomes a different woman when the lawyers say the estate will amount to $100,000. She plans a trip to Europe. Wilda has a wonderful time at a house party where Logan asks her to marry him. Myrtle, who is determined to win Logan, turns up at the dock as Wilda hoards steamer for Europe. Logan's leave-taking is affectionate. In Paris Gracie becomes interested in Mr. Gigi Cortes. But Wilda sighs for Logan, and wishes he was with her.

By MAY CHRISTIE

(Copyright, 1930.)

GRACIE WAS careful that Wilda didn't hear of her "charity." And Gigi had moved from the too expensive hotel and gone to share a little apartment at Saint Juan, nearby, with his friend, the marquis.

Wilda these days was constantly in the marquis' company.

She seemed gay and flattered sometimes . . . did Wilda. But at other times she would be moody and disappear alone for hours in the tangled wilderness of the hotel garden.

The marquis would seek her out. Bring her into the gay little yacht club perched on the edge of the rocks above the swimming pool. Give her a cocktail.

Or they would swim. Wilda looked wonderful in her bathing suit, and was as much at home as an eel in the water.

Simply Crazy
Marquis Over Wilda

"Has the marquis proposed yet, darling? He's simply crazy about you . . ."

"We're just good friends." Wilda had set her lips obstinately.

"Why, Gigi says—"

"Gigi can mind his own business and stop gossiping."

"Who?"

She was maddeningly obtuse . . . Gracie funds really wouldn't last forever.

And Randos y Randos was rich . . . and with the tremendous attraction of a title . . .

"The marquis, dear? You know perfectly who I mean."

"I've already told you I look upon him as a friend, mother."

"You'll drive me wild. With all your opportunities down here, d'you mean to tell me you're still hankering after Logan Townsend?"

To that, Wilda had remained silent. Two mails had come in. And there had been no letter from her young man in America.

Jealous of Bob
Lorma Sets Cap

Ensued days of swimming, sunbathing on the rocks and yachting. Arturo was always with her then, while her mother went for long drives in the car she had hired with Gigi Cortes.

Wilda knew they were often in the casino at Saint-Juan-les Pins, only a mile away, dining and dancing there, and then playing baccarat.

This flung her more and more in the company of Arturo.

"My friend, Gigi does not care for water sports," explained the latter.

And my mother's frightened of the sea——" Wilda might have added, too, that Gracie felt she did not look her best in the modern, scant bathing suit.

But once or twice, when it was absolutely calm, Gracie had gone out on a yacht.

With Lorma Latour, who had developed into quite a friend of Gracie's . . . which made Wilda a little uneasy.

She knew that on these yachts (with the exception of Mr. Gordon's, which was round at Villefranche but now) Lorma, and her friends indulged in wild drinking parties.

Wilda had noticed, too, that at first the ex-actress had been jealous of Bob Gordon's atten-

Autoist Gets 18 Months in Shooting

Girl Cop's Gun in Mystery

A GUN AND BADGE, property of Lotta Caldwell, a state police woman, were found on Hugh W. Mullen, Beacon Hill man, arrested in shooting—said to be accidental. Mullen was shot as was Louis J. Peterson. The blackjack held by Patrolman Joseph Rizzo, Mullen admits is his. The gun and badge belong to Miss Caldwell. Miss Caldwell will not explain Mullen's possession of them until today. (Staff photo.)

GUN OWNED BY WOMAN SLEUTH

Two Wounded in North End Garage by Weapon of State Policewoman

Hugh W. Mullen of Pinckney st., West End, was sentenced to a year and a half in jail today in municipal court as an aftermath to a shooting in a North End garage in which the gun of a state policewoman figured.

On a charge of carrying a loaded revolver, Judge Thomas H Dowde imposed a sentence of a year, and six months were given for carrying a blackjack, also the property of Miss Lotta Caldwell, of 15 Joy st., the policewoman and former social worker, according to the charge.

TWO ARE WOUNDED

Mullen waived the right of an attorney and conducted his own defense. Miss Caldwell did not appear, but police said she admitted ownership of a badge and the gun found on Mullen, but denied the blackjack.

Mullen was arrested by police of the Hanover st. station after the shooting was reported by officials of the Haymarket relief station who said they had Mullen and Louis J. Peterson, a garage employe, as patients.

Patrolman Joseph Savage told the court his investigation showed Mullen in possession of a policewoman's property after his car was towed, disabled, from Beverly and Causeway sts., North End, to the garage.

MULLEN APPEALS.

Leonard Sinopili, another garage employe, testified he handed the gun to Mullen when he found it in the yard soon after a shot rang out, piercing the hand of Mullen and the thigh of Peterson who was untying the tow rope. Sinopili took them to the hospital.

When sentence was pronounced Mullen appealed and was held on $2000, which he did not immediately obtain.

Miss Caldwell was appointed a special officer last April for special work involving girls, and a month ago Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote named her a policewoman.

MRS. SHERWOOD GEN. EDWARDS MRS. CHANNING

MAJ.-GEN. CLARENCE R. EDWARDS, "daddy of the Yankee Division," had a grand time yesterday in the double celebration, that of welcoming in 1931 and that of his 71st birthday anniversary. This all happened at his Westwood estate, "Dunrosing." Two of the many friends who called to pay their respects to the World War hattler were, Mrs. Phil Sherwood, of Dedham, and Mrs. Walter Channing, of Dover. (Staff photo.)

PERSONS NOT DEPENDENT WOULD BE REPLACED

Bachelors Third on the List of Those to Lose Work, the Phelan Report Says

Married women, single women not dependent upon their own earnings and bachelors whose families are able to support them should be released from their jobs, in that order, wherever a restriction of personnel is necessary, Gov. Allen's emergency committee on unemployment recommended today.

In a letter signed by Chairman James J. Phelan and sent to employers throughout the state, it was stated that much had been done for unskilled workers and that it was now time to devote some attention to the clerical group and white collar worker.

Employers were urged to make every effort to retain their forces at the usual number even at the expense of economical operation.

Before any adjustments leading to decreased unemployment are made in the force Phelan recommended the managing stations be released until a return of normal conditions.

1. Married women whose husbands have sufficient income to support them

2. Single women not dependent upon earnings for a livelihood, who are working for pocket money or luxuries.

3. Unmarried men whose families are able to support them.

TWO WOUNDED AT PARTY

Mrs. May MacHenry, wife of Albert T. MacHenry of 113 Franklin st, Stoneham, who was critically wounded yesterday morning by a bullet which had passed through the right hand of Claude G. Balcom of 201 Main st., Melrose, was fighting for her life early today in Melrose Hospital.

The double shooting occurred in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson, 300 Upham st., Melrose, and climaxed a party there. Mr. Johnson fired the bullet from a pistol and according to the police, the shooting was accidental.

After passing through Balcom's right hand the bullet entered Mrs. MacHenry's left shoulder and then deflected down into her body.

According to the police, the MacHenry couple, Balcom, the Johnsons and several others had attended the masquerade dance at the American Legion bungalow last night. After leaving the dance the entire group went to the Johnson home to celebrate the New Year.

Johnson, who is a member of the American Legion pistol team and also of the Melrose Pistol Club, was leaving the house to drive one of the guests to their homes and he noticed his pistol on a mantel. He believed that it was not loaded and put it in his pocket.

When he returned to the house, he flourished the pistol and pulled the trigger. He was startled with the sound of the discharge and then became almost frantic upon seeing two of his guests wounded.

STATE'S OLDEST BANK HEAD DIES

Henry Morrill Batchelder, president of the Merchants National Bank of Salem and former newspaperman, died today at Salem Hospital at the age of 78. He went under an operation eight days ago and failed to rally.

In the newspaper capacity he was one of the first in the country to transmit a news story to his paper over the telephone. The story was a lecture by Alexander Graham Bell on the then new invention, the telephone.

From a clerkship in the bank he rose through the various offices until he was elected president, 23 years ago. He had held the office ever since a record in the State for longevity in office as president of a bank.

He was also treasurer of the Salem Electric Lighting Co. since its organization, 38 years ago, and had served as president of the Salem Board of Trade, vice-president of the Massachusetts Board of Trade, Salem Five Cents Savings Bank and was first president of the Massachusetts Bankers Association.

He is survived by his widow, the former Martha Hoston, and three sons, Samuel Batchelder of Boston, Nathaniel of Windsor, Ct., and W. Osgood Batchelder of Chicago, Ill.

A dramatic reading, Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," will be given by Grover C. Shaw, at the Boston Public Library, Sunday afternoon.

MANY COMPLAIN OF COLD CARS

Complaints of lack of heat in Jamaica Plain-Subway surface cars of the Boston Elevated Railway Company will be investigated, according to Asst. Gen. Manager E. M. Flint. Many passengers complained of lack of heat today.

Mr. Flint denied any cutting down of heat in cars and said the Elevated is compelled by law to keep them between 40 and 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 40 or under.

"The heat is automatically controlled by thermostats," said Mr. Flint. "We have isolated complaints of lack of heat, generally due to defective thermostats or blowing of fuses, but these are attended to as soon as complaints come in.

"We have as many complaints from persons who request us to keep the windows open through fear of 'flu' as we have from patrons desiring more heat."

Discharged Worker Steals Bus and Heads for Hub

Just about the limit in automobile stealing was reached yesterday by a discharged employe of the Greyhound bus line, who stole one of the large 40-passenger buses in Jersey City, N. J. and is believed to be on his way to Boston with it.

Police of Boston and all cities along the route have been asked to watch for him. The bus carried New Jersey registration number [illegible] and bears the number [illegible] on its side.

New Blood in G. O. P. Councils Is Urged

There should be an injection of new blood and new ideas in the executive councils of the Republican party, according to a resolution adopted last night at a meeting of the executive committee of the Young Men's Republican Social League of Boston. The resolution states that young men and women Republicans throughout the state should be invited to participate in the councils that are responsible for the management of the Republican party's affairs.

The meeting was held at [illegible] Carver st.

FRIENDS GREET GEN. EDWARDS

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards arrived, "Daddy of the Yankee Division" observed his 71st birthday at his estate, "Dunrosing," Westwood, yesterday.

Many of his friends and ex-buddies were on hand by the general during the afternoon and were [illegible] at a dinner party at night in the home of the 26th Division commander. The general was assisted in receiving by Mrs. John Heath, who was assisted in turn by Mrs. Edward Hyatt, Mrs. Kate Hyatt, Mrs. Mary Hyatt, Mrs. Heath and Mrs. Hyatt are the wives of the general's three sons.

The general received many gifts, among them two large birthday cakes and during the afternoon an army plane flew over Dunrosing and dropped a wreath.

SOMERVILLE ALDERMAN KNOCKS OUT FIREMAN IN POLITICAL ROW

WINNER HAD BANNED JOBS ON DAYS OFF

Moran Claims Company 6 Had Passed Insult and Challenge to Do Battle

A political feud led to a fist fight between Alderman George J. Moran, of Somerville, and a Somerville fireman in the clubroom of the Cambridge lodge of Elks last night, it was learned today.

The fireman, according to witnesses, was carried out, semi-unconscious.

Moran admitted his part in the fight and declared that he resorted to his fists when the fireman continued to insult him.

"Yes, it's true," he said. "There was a battle and I hit the fireman, a member of Engine Co. 6. He was accompanied by an officer. When we met in the club he declared I had passed a remark about firemen.

"I denied it, but the fireman kept repeating it. Then he challenged me. He took off his coat, but I beat him to the punch."

Moran was instrumental in framing the ordinance which prohibits firemen from engaging in other occupations when off duty. He was recently quoted as saying:

"Somerville firemen will be wanting wheel chairs to ride around the firehouses in pretty soon.

KEATING MAY BE GARRETT JUDGE

Judge Patrick M Keating, one of the senior members of the superior court bench, will preside at the trial next week of Oliver P. Garrett, former liquor raider, according to reports at the courthouse today.

The Garrett case is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, and an official assignment of the presiding justice will be made by Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall on Monday.

A list of assignments was given out today allotting the first session of the court to Judge Keating, the second to Judge Harold P. Williams and the third to the chief justice. Two district court judges, Allan Buttrick and Ernest E. Hobson, will complete the Suffolk superior criminal court assignments next week.

Judge Keating has presided at some of the biggest criminal cases heard in Suffolk courts.

Among the most notable was the trial of the Rollins brothers for murder, one of whom, George Rollins, was pardoned on New Years Eve.

District Attorney William J. Foley today said he was ready to proceed with the prosecution of Garrett on charges of larceny and extortion. From other sources it was learned unusual procedure may be asked for.

Hugh J. Jones Drops Dead in His Office

Hugh J. Jones, 66, of Jones Bros. Co., dropped dead today in his office on the seventh floor of the Rice building, 10 High st. Dr. C. P. Sylvester, of Beacon st., Back Bay, who happened to be in the building, pronounced him dead. Jones lived in Montpelier, Vt., but maintained the Boston office for the granite business conducted by his company.

League Court Talk at Forum on Sunday

Christopher T. Fitzgerald, former Boston assessor and student of European politics, will attack the League Court Sunday evening at the Common Cause Forum in Franklin Union Hall.

Safety Campaign Launched as Coasting Accident Toll Mounts Rapidly

COASTING ACCIDENTS that have passed the 100 mark during the last two weeks of snow, spurred police authorities of Greater Boston on to emergency measures, to prevent a greater toll of injuries to children. There is a lot of fun, but many dangers in tandem sled riding. This is especially true to the younger girls and boys. The picture above, taken on Pope's Hill, Dorchester, truly illustrates the manner in which tandem sled riding accidents occur.

TWO COASTERS FATALLY HURT

Coasting claimed another victim today when Thomas Roche six of 84 Greenwich st., Dorchester, was instantly killed while sliding in Ronan Park, Dorchester.

The boy ran under the automobile driven by Harry L. Anderson of 25 So. Monroe ter., Dorchester. He was taken to the Boston City Hospital by James S. Culler of 7 Speedwell st.

Meanwhile the coasting death toll mounted here and throughout New England as a Roxbury girl succumbed to injuries in the Boston City Hospital. Three more injuries from coasting were reported in Greater Boston.

TRANSFUSION FAILS

Winifred Cutting, 13, of Columbia ave., Roxbury, injured while coasting in the Parker Hill section last Tuesday, died at the City Hospital early yesterday. Hospital officials said death was due to a ruptured spleen, and internal hemorrhage. She failed to rally following a blood transfusion given on Wednesday.

Two women were injured coasting at Franklin Park yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Hazel C. Green, 31, of Estrella st., Jamaica Plain, received a fractured leg when her sled crashed into a tree on a hill near Iffley rd. She was taken to the City Hospital.

Miss Margaret Scully, 21, of Walk Hill st., Forest Hills, was treated at the Forest Hills Hospital for cuts on her leg, sustained when she fell from a toboggan.

In East Boston, Edward O'Connell, 8, of Wadsworth st., swerved into a pole when he tried to avoid hitting an automobile. He received serious internal injuries.

TWO HURT IN CRASH

In Spencer, a woman and a boy were injured when their sleds crashed in a hill in the season's first coasting accident. Mrs. James McNeeny, 24, of Elm st., was taken to the Worcester Memorial Hospital with a fractured right ankle. The boy, Norman Gregoire, 14, sustained a broken left arm.

Six coasting accidents in Worcester brought serious injury to eight children. Two were badly hurt when their sled crashed into a tree in Castle st. Marcelle Galle, 16, sustained a fractured skull while John Houlihan, 17, was badly cut and bruised.

Helen Crane, 15, received a crushed left side and her companion, Grace Fleming, 14, sustained deep wounds in both legs when their sled hit a parked auto in Morningside. Patsy Picarelli, 12, crashed into a tree in East Park, sustaining severe internal injuries.

DR. STURGIS TO WED TEACHER

Hull and Hingham awaited with interest today for tomorrow's wedding of Dr. Walter H. Sturgis, 36-year-old founder of Sturgis Hospital at Hulland Miss F. Mildred Foley, 22, a kindergarten teacher.

The romance developed through the doctor's tour of the school in his care of the children of the town.

Miss Foley, an attractive brunette, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Foley of 12 Thaxter st., Hingham, but has taught in Hull schools since her graduation from Miss Beale's school in Boston.

Dr. Sturgis' wife died a year ago and only last April his own life was despaired of through illness.

He has one daughter, Miss Emma Sturgis, who makes her home with her father on Nantasket ave., in the Allerton section of Hull.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. John Abbot Redmond pastor of the Hingham Methodist Church, with only a few intimate friends of the couple in attendance.

CHILDREN who are careless in steering and especially those children who are not strong enough to steer their fast moving sleds, often crash into lamp posts along the snow covered "fun streets," such as is indicated by the picture above, taken at Pope's Hill, Dorchester. The girls are, Blanche Fallen and Rita Libby of Dorchester. (Staff photo.)

CRASHES between automobiles and sleds have added greatly to the number of accidents. Here we have Iola Calderwood and Marie Rowden, of Dorchester, just missing the hill climbing automobile.

2 ARRAIGNED IN $500 P. O. LOOT

Charged with robbery of $500 from the safe in the Astor st. sub postal station, last July, two former clerks were arraigned before Judge Lowell in Federal Court today. They are Charles F. Walker, of Plymouth and Daniel Carrol, formerly of Park st., Somerville and now of Philadelphia. They were secretly indicted last week.

Sad Greeting for 1931 as Bullet Spills Wine

Tony Caruso of Everett st., East Boston, poured the last glass of his 1927 wine vintage to drink a toast to the New Year.

Then he stepped into the next room of his home to invite all to witness the ceremony.

Some neighbor discharged a barrage of gun fire and one of the stray bullets hit the window sash, zipped through the window, and struck the wine glass.

The bullet was recovered on the floor, but the wine wasn't.

Funeral of Former City Inspector Held

Funeral services for James J. Mullen, father of James J Mullen, Jr., assistant clerk of the Charlestown Municipal court, who died Tuesday, were held today in St. Mary's church, Charlestown. Mr. Mullen, who was in 78th year, was born and always lived in the Bunker Hill district.

He was for more than 30 years an inspector in the sanitary department of the City of Boston, retiring a number of years ago. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

Schooner and Barge Go Under Hammer

The four-masted schooner M Vivian Pierce and the confiscated barge Eagle Hill will be put up at government auction tomorrow. The schooner will be sold at Meridian st., East Boston, wharf at noon to satisfy claims against her in civil suits.

An hour later the barge and her cargo of 800 tons of crushed stone will go under the hammer at Commercial wharf. The Eagle Hill was seized by the coast guard off the coast of Maine a month ago with a cargo of liquor aboard.

4 BOYS HELD IN POLICE THREAT

Four East Boston youths, who police say threatened to have a "gang in Revere" put a Winthrop sergeant on the spot, were held in bonds of $1000 each for the Grand Jury today charged with larceny of a Winthrop automobile.

They were booked as Charles Cammarano, 19, of Wordsworth st., John E. O'Brien, 18, of Byron st., Peter Repetto, 20, of Addison st. and Norman Martell, 19, of Wordsworth st., all East Boston.

Sergt. William G Wells of the Winthrop police made the capture after a chase from Seaview ave., Winthrop, to Ingleside Park. He said the youths ran when he questioned them concerning the auto of John J. Archdeacon, Jr., of Seaview ave., parked near the curb.

Man Arrested in Probe of $200 Fire

After a $200 fire of suspected incendiary origin had been extinguished in an unoccupied South End house owned by his sister, John Dow, 50, of Washington st., South End, was arrested last night. The house where the fire occurred is at Wilkes st., South End.

NEW START FOR TAGGED AUTOS

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman announced today that the past is a closed book, as regards tags.

He gives each car owner a clean page in the police book, allowing each to start the year with a clean record.

Under the Hultman system of tagging, this was a valuable contribution to the peace of mind of many car owners, inasmuch as they had received one or two tags and were fearful of getting more, which would spell trouble.

The first tag means a warning, the second a trip to court, unless one gives a good excuse, the third a court visit regardless of excuse, and a fourth means a suspension of license by the motor vehicle registry.

There is but one qualification in the commissioner's announcement. In cases where the police have definitely decided to prosecute, because of past violations of the parking rules, there is no absolution. The car owner is just out of luck, that's all.

Chelsea Taxi Driver Is Robbed of $20

Another taxicab holdup occurred last night when James J. Reidy of 5 Cross st., Chelsea, reported to police that two men he picked up in his cab in Chelsea sq., and brought to Norman st., Everett, held him up at gun point and took $20 from his pockets. They escaped by running through back yards.

MAYOR ASKS 13 MILLIONS FOR STREET WORK

Two Bills Filed at State House Would Cover a Period of Two Years

Two bills calling for the expenditure of $13,000,000 outside the debt limit for street construction in Boston were filed today at the State House on petition of Mayor Curley.

Under the first bill, a new traffic highway to cost $11,000,000 would start at Chardon st., Bowdoin sq., circle the financial district and come out at Arlington sq. in the South End.

STREET WIDENINGS

Chardon st. would be widened to Merrimac st. and an extension put through to Haymarket sq. At Haymarket sq., there would be a traffic circle. From that point the new highway would be along or adjacent to Cross st to Commercial st thence over private and public property to State st. coming out at a point about 200 feet west of Atlantic ave.

Albany st. from Kneeland to Seneca st. would be widened and the bridges over the Boston & Albany and the New Haven railroads would be reconstructed. Continuation of the highway would be via Seneca, Motte and Castle sts to Arlington sq. There would be other traffic circles at Broadway and at Castle, Paul and Tremont sts.

TWO-YEAR PROJECTS

The bridge over the railroad tracks at the latter point would be relocated and all rights of the Elevated to maintain tracks and structures on Castle st. would be taken away.

The second bill would give the city authority to borrow up to $3,000,000 for reconstructing accepted streets.

CHAUNCY ST. STATION OPENS

"Flattering comments" marked the opening of new postoffice substation at 107-111 Chauncy st., which takes the place of the Essex st. station, according to Assistant Postmaster William E. Hurley, after hearing reports of the progress of business during the forenoon.

Incidentally the 35 carriers who were detailed from the Essex station began deliveries today from the South Postal annex, Beach st. and Atlantic ave.

A force of 23 clerks functioned at the Chauncy st. branch. Business there will be confined to "box service" and "window accommodation." No carriers will operate from there.

HENRY P. LONG KILLS SELF IN TOPSFIELD

ILL HEALTH IS BLAMED FOR ACT

Son of the State Tax Commissioner Found Dead in Home, a Bullet Hole in His Head

Henry Pingree Long, 21, son of State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long, killed himself at his home in Topsfield early yesterday, it was learned today.

He committed suicide by shooting. Ill health, over a period of many years, drove him to the act, it is believed.

Young Long had attended a New Year's Eve dance. He retired to his bedroom, and with his own .38 calibre revolver shot himself through the right temple.

PARENTS FOUND BODY

Mr. and Mrs. Long, aroused by the shot, found the body on the floor. The gun was beside it. Dr. Henry Sanborn, family physician and associate medical examiner was called and pronounced the youth dead.

An official verdict of suicide by firearms was filed by Dr. Elmer S. Bagnall, medical examiner.

"My boy was impulsive and high strung," Commissioner Long said. "He had not enjoyed good health. It is my opinion that that was the reason for his act.

"He had been to the firemen's ball in Topsfield on New Year's Eve and returned about 1:45 a. m. We all retired a few minutes after he came home. I had just fallen asleep when I heard the shot.

"My wife and I jumped up and went into Henry's room. He was lying on the floor, the pistol at his side. I called Dr. Sanborn and he pronounced him dead.

"There was no note. If he had any troubles he took them with him. He never said anything about taking his life, but he had been sick almost since he was born. He never enjoyed good health."

The victim of the tragedy was the eldest of three children of Commissioner and Mrs. Marzet Pingree Long. Catherine is 16 and Ransom is 12.

The family has resided in High st., Topsfield, for many years.

No Chance for a Mixup

FACING A PROBLEM of identifying two twin girls, Anna and Mary Athas of 621 Harrison ave., physicians at the City Hospital marked the children with adhesive tape. The children, threatened with pneumonia, were marked with the tape so that nurses could keep their charts straight. (Staff photo.)

HIGHER COURTS BUILDING HIT

A unanimous report against the proposal to erect a building on the State House grounds at Derne and Rowdoin sts. to house the Supreme court, the land court and the recorder of decisions, was made today to the Legislature by a special commission.

"The State House should not be deprived of the open space east of the Brigham extension," the commission said, "moreover the use of this area under any plan for construction would interfere with traffic in Ashburton pl., Bowdoin and Mt. Vernon sts., and Mt. Vernon sts., and with the present location of two monuments and the Beacon Column."

Because it was directed to study no particular site and no other, it does not suggest the best method of using the space for such a building, this suggestion is submitted as the most feasible by the commission, although it does not favor its adoption.

The new East wing, attached to the north end of the Brigham extension on Derne st., extending to Beacon st., similar in architecture to the present front east wing.

Women Dry Reform Workers Plan Whist

Headed by Mrs. John J. Horgan of Dorchester and Mrs. Morton P. Prince, of Boston, a committee of 50 members of the Boston division, Women's Organization for the Reform of National Prohibition are sponsoring a subscription bridge whist party at the Statler Hotel on Saturday afternoon, January 10. Opening the educational campaign for temperance planned by this organization, Mrs. Alfred D. Radley, of Winchester, will be introduced by Mrs. Robert W. Lovett, co-chairman of the Massachusetts branch.

Chelsea Man Burned as Stove Explodes

Wallace Shoemaker, 38, of 23 Walnut st., Chelsea, used kerosene oil to start a fire in the kitchen range in his home today, and the resultant explosion sent him to the hospital and called out the firemen.

Shoemaker was taken to Chelsea Memorial Hospital with second degree burns on hands, arms and chest. The blaze was extinguished with slight damage. Shoemaker lives alone.

400 Autos Stolen in Somerville in 1930

Four hundred automobiles were stolen in Somerville during 1930 according to police records, and all but eight have been recovered. Some were picked up in Rhode Island and New York, but the majority were recovered in Somerville, Cambridge, Medford and Charlestown.

TWINS MARKED WITH TAPE

Anna and Mary Athas, two-year-old twins, brought to City Hospital yesterday suffering from bronchial pneumonia, look so much alike that hospital attendants were forced to mark them with adhesive tape in order to tell which is which.

Soon after they were admitted it became apparent that if charts were to be kept of their temperatures and condition a method of identification would be necessary. They are almost exactly the same weight and height and are the prettiest twins that have been at the hospital for a long time.

Waltham Reports Less Drunkenness

The number of arrests for drunkenness in Waltham in 1930 was 333 less than in 1929, according to the annual report of the police department. The total for the year just ended was 443. There was a corresponding decrease in the number of arrests for violation of the liquor laws.

Police ascribe the decrease in sobriety to the economic depression, asserting that lack of work has apparently prevented many from indulging in forbidden beverages.

Arlington Woman Holds 'At Home' at 91

Mrs. Elisabeth Mary (Chase) Elliott, who is one of the few nonagenarians in Arlington, marked her 91st birthday, in the home of her niece, Mrs. Stuart N. Hotaling, of 74 Freeman st., East Arlington.

Mrs. Elliott, who is enjoying good health, was informally "at home" to relatives and friends who called to extend to her their congratulations. She was born in Haverhill, and lived in Cambridge for years before moving to Arlington.

Fullers Entertain 300 at Reception

Nearly 300 members of the Copley Society spent New Year's at a reception given in their honor by ex-Governor and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller at the Fuller town house, 136 Beacon st.

From 4 to 6 p. m. the guests viewed Fuller's carefully chosen painting collection and attended a tea served by their hostess.

MELROSE FIRE DRIVES FIVE TO STREET

Several Homes Threatened by Rockland St. Flames; Neighbors Care for Victims

Five persons, including an 11-year-old boy, were driven to the street in their night clothing when fire broke out on the second floor of a two-story wooden dwelling at 18 Rockland st., in an exclusive residential section of Melrose Highlands, early today.

Heman Greene, his wife and son Carleton Greene, 11, were aroused by the crackling of flames and, after notifying fire headquarters fled to the street through smoke-filled hallway.

Two sisters, the Misses Alice and Linnie White who occupied the first floor, were also driven out. All five persons were taken care of by neighbors. The house was damaged and several nearby homes were threatened.

OWL UP A TREE FOR DAYS

The sage population of Cambridge, city of education, went up one today when a wise old owl was found blinking in a tree at Magazine and Warland sts.

Neighbors said he—or she—was deserted a few days ago by a mate but—wisely—has decided to wait out the mate's return.

Boy sharpshooters have made many tries to dislodge the bird with snow and ice ammunition. The perch is near the top of an 80-foot tree from where short trips in the air start and end.

No effort has been made to capture the bird, nor will they be made, the police say.

Race Prejudice Hit at Garrison Meeting

Race prejudice was scored last night at a meeting sponsored by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, in observance of the 100th anniversary of the founding of The Liberator by William Lloyd Garrison at the Park Street Church.

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Sherman Eddy and Rabbi R. Widen spoke. Bishop William F. Anderson gave the invocation.

Robber Victim

A THIEF GOT $130 today in the Arlington st. subway station when he grabbed a handbag Mrs. Ellen B. Sharpe was carrying. Her husband chased the thief, but he escaped. (Staff photo.)

HANDBAG THIEF GETS $130

Handbag thieves were active in Chelsea and Rock Bay, today, one escaping with $130 and the other foiled by stopping on the lee in making his getaway.

The victim of the successful thief was Mrs Ellen B. Sharpe of 99 Rutherford ave Charlestown, who was walking with her husband in the Arlington st. tunnel.

The couple left a car at Arlington station and were in the foot passage to 110 street when the thief grabbed Mrs Sharpe's pocketbook and escaped, with Sharpe in pursuit.

Mrs. Anna Shuner 35 of 30 Warren ave., Chelsea, proved plucky after a youth seized her pocketbook near her home and pounced on him when he slipped in starting away.

She retrieved her pocketbook with $75 in it but was unable to hold the thief. Three men were arrested on suspicion but Miss Shuner failed to identify any of them.

Newport N H., Peterboro N H., Poland Spring Me and at North Adams Greenfield Winchendon, Mass. The conditions are fair at Woodstock Vt., Plymouth N H., North Conway, N H and Laconia, N. H.

Mrs. Marion Stevens Succumbs to Illness

Mrs. Marion Diana Rice Stevens, clubwoman, died at her home 12 Garrison st., Chestnut Hill, yesterday, after an illness of about three weeks. She is survived by her husband Henry Warren Stevens, assistant superintendent of the electrical engineering department of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

Services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home and burial will be in Cambridge Cemetery.

Officials of Newton Re-Elect Officers

With impressive exercises, the 1931 Newton city government was organized yesterday afternoon in the aldermanic chamber at City Hall.

President Roy V. Collins and Vice-President Thomas M. Gallagher were re-elected to the board of aldermen. The board re-elected Francis Newhall, treasurer and collector and Daniel A. White, comptroller of accounts.

Earthquake Shock Recorded at Harvard

A sharp earthquake was recorded at Harvard seismograph station today, beginning at 4.06 a. m. standard time. It was followed by a much smaller one, whose maximum motion began at 6.30. The distance of the first shock from Cambridge was over 2000 miles. Owing to confusion of the two records the distance of the second shock cannot be determined.

The combined record lasted three hours.

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

BY A RICH AND RARE combination of acting and directorial genius, "The Criminal Code," now in its premiere showings at the RKO Keith's, has a foothold on the ladder as one of the top pictures of this new year. Done with fine fidelity to realism, a strong story sweeps the screen, as the cameras swing from many angles to fire the imagination, hasten the interest, and grip the heart. Columbia, which made the picture, may well be proud of it.

* * *

THOSE WHO SAW the stage play will note differences, as it has been tailored out for movie audiences. But these are not necessarily to be by no means detrimental, and if they do occasionally give us a sugary sequence, there is never a let-up in the dramatic onward swing of the director stride of the capable Howard Hawks. Because of him, and because of the fine acting of Walter Huston, here achieving one of his greatest roles, "The Criminal Code" gets its clutch upon the emotions, and holds us to the end of the last foot. somewhat as did the Ancient Mariner hold the wedding guest in the poem. It is not only an outstanding photoplay, but it surpasses the other films of prison life. It has a markingly good atmosphere, and it is superb entertainment.

* * *

THE PRODUCTION develops lively speed at the very start. Soon it is dealing with prison mores. Its dialogue in general is above par; mostly it is terse. Then Mr. Hawks, as every wise director should do, avails himself of the power of the silences. Passages of vigor there are when there is no word spoken: such as when the prisoners tread the concrete, with the effect upon the observer of a clock ticking at midnight in the darkness of a "haunted" house.

* * *

THE CAST IS a corking one. Mr. Huston IS the direct antipode—IS the prison warden, always classy, he is—with a few pegs higher than ever before. He is not acting; he is living as you'll see. He makes us thrill to his austerity, to his acts to his sensitivity. Among the others, there is Boris Karloff, sterling as Galloway. There is Boston's own John Bill Mills as the doctor. And Mary Doran, though but fleetingly seen, is fine. Phillips Holmes, in a rather passive role is genuinely impressive—his best work to date. Of them all, the weakest is the heroine, Constance Cummings.

We urge every fan to see "The Criminal Code." It is the kind of picture which ought to remain in the Rialto lights for some weeks.

JEAN HARLOW

JEAN IS the heroine of Hell's Angels" now on the screen at Loew's State.

FILM CLASSIC AT REPERTORY

The Repertory Theater most auspiciously starts off its career as the home of the Screen Guild. It had a stellar program for the opening night; and for its first week it is showing one of the most enjoyable pictures viewed here in a long, long time—"The Secrets of the Orient," and masterpiece of its kind and so brimful of streaming humor, pleasing fantasy, and adept use of the camera as to make the great percentage of Hollywood movies seem weak in comparison.

The Guild showed admirable judgment in the selection of its features, the premiere night proving one of the most pleasurable variety as a result.

But the wonderfully satisfying film fare came last. "Secrets of the Orient" in the matter of workmanly art takes second place to but few motion pictures; it leaves innumerable far to the rear. To sit through it becomes a genial, tingly thing, the film acts like a tonic. It holds in abundant measure all the principles of the old art, now too rarely seen upon the silver sheet. Made in Germany, the picture proves the claim of producers of that country to a top place.

Its theme is one of the tales out of the "Arabian Nights." This is expressed in spectacular fashion; the direction is magnificent, the acting wellnigh perfect. There is never a dull moment; the narrative tides with a rush; and the humor is spontaneous. It is a picture that no lover of the best should miss.

TENOR TO TOP BOSTON BILL

Frank Richardson appears in person on the stage of the RKO Keith-Boston tomorrow. Richardson had always built a nice voice even when singing in fact had a much more important place in the scheme of things than it is today. Naturally it wasn't much of a voice as school. But a mediocre man heard Richardson sing and offered him a job as assistant medicine maker and entertainer in the Dromedary Medicine Show. With a voice such as he possesses today, it is no wonder that Frank is going to be a banner year for him.

CECILIA LOFTUS TO STAR IN 'OVER THE HILL'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2—When the warm weather of August comes, the movie fans are promised something that will make them forget the heat. Winfield Sheehan is planning to make a talkie version of "Over the Hill" with Cecilia Loftus in the mother role.

Winnie figures by that time Miss Loftus will have a movie following that will reach from here to the Atlantic coast and back again. Remember it was "Over the Hill" that brought Mary Carr to fame and gave the Fox Company a prestige that they had not before enjoyed with the film fans. Jules Furthman is slated to write the scenario and Henry King, who made such a sympathetic picture of "Lightnin'," has been chosen by Winnie to direct "Over the Hill." The sons and daughters who shared honors with Mrs. Carr in the silent version will be chosen later.

HOWARD HUGHES' patient search for a story that will give Billie Dove the right chance as a Colleen star, will soon end. Edwin Justus Mayer, well known writer, has just been signed by Mr. Hughes and given as his very first assignment an order to produce a play for the beauteous Billie. Edwin Mayer ought to be the one who can do it, too. He is the author of "Firebrand" and "Children of Darkness," two Broadway stage plays to say nothing of innumerable screen adaptations and originals. Looks as if Mr. Hughes is building a big organization. What with organizing a chain of theaters with Harold B. Franklin, he will have a place to show his productions.

I MET NORMA SHEARER

who has been struggling with a bad cold the day before New Years on her way to the doctor's office. She told me that Irving Thalberg had been ill in bed and that she had been treated for laryngitis, an illness that she naturally was hoping to avoid so that she can start her picture, "Strangers May Kiss," on schedule. "We haven't been allowed to hold the baby on account of the flu," she said. "My only glimpse of him has been from the door." That, I can imagine, is the worst part of Irving Thalberg's illness. I am glad Neil Hamilton is to play opposite Norma for he did such a fine piece of work in "The Dawn Patrol" that I believe his 1931

JUNE WALKER

"WAR NURSE," on the screen at Loew's Orpheum, features Miss Walker in one of her best roles.

WOMAN SHOW DIRECTOR

Antoinette Perry, co-director of "Strictly Dishonorable" at the Colonial, is the first stage director

Antoinette Perry

to be signed by Loew's State. She succeeds Robert Milton, who has been engaged by Arthur Hopkins to direct "Hamlet" with John Barrymore in the title role.

Miss Perry's first production will be "Scarlet Pages," a mystery play by Elmer Rice, author of "On Trial" and "The Adding Machine." Rice is also the author of "Street Scene," which Miss Perry directed.

Miss Perry has had a long and varied career on the stage. She was born in Rome, Ga., and made her debut in stock in Atlanta. She has been a member of the Theatre Guild and has appeared in many productions on Broadway. She is married to Frederick Brady, who is also a director.

"The Office Wife" Tops Bowdoin Bill

The Bowdoin Square has changed its entire program for the remainder of the week. One of the film features is "The Office Wife" with Lewis Stone and Dorothy Mackaill. Another picture is "See America Thirst." The Our Gang feature is "Helping Grandma." The Lido Venice Girls in a new routine of songs and steps will appear. Tonight's bill comes tonight with extra acts.

Loew's State

"Hell's Angels," Howard Hughes' $4,000,000 air spectacle, comes to the state today for its first local popular-priced showings. A Flip the Frog cartoon, "Curious Murder," and Hearst Metrotone News will be the short features to be shown.

'THE RIGHT TO LOVE' ON MET PROGRAM

Ruth Chatterton's acting, especially in a mother role, and a good story make "The Right to Love" now at the Metropolitan interesting screen entertainment. There are intricacies in the work the star has to do. First, she is seen as a Western farmer's daughter who becomes the mother of a child born out of wedlock. Later she is seen both as this child, grown to adult years, and as its parent, a mature woman, which, incidentally, is the part where the star shines brightest.

The narrative is one of much power, and rather novel among screen plots. It is based upon Susan Glaspell's novel, "Brook Evans." Readers of the work will recall its weaving of the parallel threads in the love lives of the farmer's daughter, and of her daughter. The two are alike in their quest of happiness and upon an unusual theme in the twisted schemings of Fate.

Best of the cast, next to Miss Chatterton, are Paul Lukas, always good; and David manners who has been rising fast to the fore. Other good ones are Irving Pichel and George Baxter

On the stage, the Met has a colorful revue, "Romantic Knights," starring Roy Bolger, Roy Cropper, Olga Steck, June Worth and the Stuart Ensemble. H. S

Be Sure and Take A Geography and An Interpreter to ↑ Tonight's Garden Wrestling, Warns Old Man McSweeney ↓

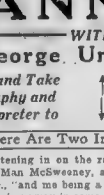
But There Are Two Irishmen In It Anyway

"I was listening in on the radio last night, Mister Gilloley," remarked Old Man McSweeney, as he thumbed the tobacco down in the old T. D., "and me being a bit hard o'hearing I thought the feller was jabbering away in some foreign tongue. But it turned out he only was naming the Eytalians, Roosians, Dutchmen and Greeks that do be takin' purt in the wrestlin' show at the Garden, tonight. There was Dusek, Vakturof, Pojello, Brunowics, Garabaldi'——

"Sounds like the Notre Dame football team," interrupted Young Mister Gilloley.

"Bedad, and don't ye be casting any asparagus at the Fightin' Irish, me fresh young codgemahon!", came back Old Man McSweeney, "Or, old as I am, I'll be givin' you a worse b'ating than Paddy gave the drum.

"But as I meant to remark before I was interrupted," went on Old Man McSweeney, "your education has been sadly neglected and you should go to the Garden, tonight, and improve it. You'll learn more geography than they teach at Harvard. I see be the paper that Vakturoff comes from Russia, Pojello from Lithuania, Brunowics from Poland, Garabaldi from Italy, Maxos from Greece and Manish from Jugo Slavia."



George Underwood

"What County is that near?" queried young Mister Gilloley.

"I dunno," answered Old Man McSweeney, "but it must be in the North of Ireland."

"Isn't there any member of the Clan-Na-Gael or the Sinn Fein in the show tonight?" queried young Mister Gilloley.

"Mr. bucko," exploded Old Man McSweeney, "I'm surprised at your ignorance. Had ye no eyes? Could there be any fight or a wrestlin' show without an Irishman in it? And in Boston of all places, where there are more sons of the Emerald Isle than in the town of Kilkenny itself!

SHAMUS AND PAT

"Sure and there's Irish in tonight's Garden matches, two pre-rared young Irishmen, Shamus McMillen and Pat O'Shocker. Ah, Pat O'Shocker, there's the big, fine, red-headed, strapping spalpeen for you. Begorrah, he can strangle an elephant with his left, choke a bon constrictor with his right and put a trifle off the tracks with his foot. And Jim McMillen, that's another broth of a by."

"The paper here," interrupted young Mister Gilloley, "says Mc Millen comes from the University of Illinois and O'Shocker hails from Salt Lake City. They are about as Irish as Plymouth Rock."

"Ochone! Ochone!" wailed Old Man McSweeney. "'Tis a lie! 'Tis a slanderr-ersous pe-ev-aricatious lie-dad, McMillen comes from Tipperary and he's a direct descendant of Finn McCool, who one av'nin' while chasin the divil through Athlone hopped across Ireland in three jumps. Begorrah, you can see the marks of his footprints to this day!"

"But O'Shocker," insisted young Mister Gilloley, "I suppose you will admitted as I was born in Ireland, too."

"Faith, O'Shocker was born and raised in old Ireland," snapped Old Man McSweeney. "His grandfather was Shawn The Bullock from County Mayo. And if you will look in the upstanding young fella dressing room tonight and get a look at his feet I'll prove it to you."

"Come in the dressing room and get a look at his feet?" queried the mystified young Mister Gilloley, "What do you mean"

"I repeat, your ign'rance is amazing," answered Old Man McSweeney, "Begorrah, don't you know that all Mayo men are web-footed? They get that way from trottin' over the bogs."

"Well, I guess I will go and see these two Irishmen wrestle in the Garden, tonight," remarked young Mister Gilloley. "But in order to understand the whole show I'm going to bring along a geography and an interpreter."

"You'll hear them rooting in 17 different languages," agreed Old Man McSweeney.

WHY JACK IS OUT

There is more than some people imagine in that story of Paul Von Zickursch printed in New York about Jack Dempsey getting a $750,000 offer to box Schmeling and how the only thing that blocked the Manassa Mauler from returning at the wars was his love for charming Estelle Taylor of the films.

It may be doubted that in these parlous times, when the best way to keep the wolf from the door is to let him in, and starve, any reputable and recognized promoter or club would guarantee Dempsey $750,000. But there are any number of reputable business men and financiers who would back a $500,000 offer for Dempsey, and perhaps some group really have consented to underwrite a $750,000 Dempsey-Schmeling match.

We don't know whether any fabulous offer really has been made to Dempsey. But we do know that Jack would be back in the game if it were not for his wife. She always has been against Dempsey continuing as a fighter. After the Tunney fight in Chicago, Estelle exacted a solemn promise from Jack that he never again would draw on a glove in real ring combat.

When Mrs. Dempsey was visiting Jack at Tom Luther's on Saratoga Lake during training for one of his last fights she received a telegram that her mother was ill in Washington, Del. Your correspondent happened to be seated with Dempsey on the piazza of his bungalow there among the pines when the telegram came. Mrs. Dempsey packed hastily and as there was little time for her to make the train in Saratoga, Jack asked us if we would drive his wife over in our car.

During the ride from Tom Luther's to Saratoga, Mrs. Dempsey kept crying. In an attempt to cheer her we remarked that her mother probably was not seriously ill and that everything would be all right.

"I'm not worrying so much over Mother," explained Mrs. Dempsey, "I know about what is the matter at home. It's Jack I'm worrying over. Oh, how I wish he would get out of this fight game! We have plenty of money and what's the use of his keeping on running the risk of being disfigured, even seriously maimed or injured? Yes, even killed. Many boxers have been killed in the ring. I'll never be happy until Jack hangs up his gloves forever."

Remembering Estelle Taylor's confession we are not one to doubt that it is Mrs. Jack Dempsey, and Mrs. Jack Dempsey alone, who bars the Manassa Mauler's return to the ring.

HOCKEY "DOG FIGHTS"

Have the powers that be behind the other hockey teams decided that the only way to stop the Bruins is to "rought" them off the ice? It looks that way. All the recent games have been "dog fights." Why did the officials in the recent Bruins-Ottawa game permit Joe Lamb in the early stages to slash and sling Eddie Shore without penalty? Shore, with two major penalties shackling him, could not "come back." Eddie had to "take it," that's all. The officials allowed Lamb to get away with "plenty" before they finally took action.

That was a hot scrap the Bruins and the Phillies staged here the other night. But you should have seen the famous battle, a long, long time ago between the Montreal Wanderers and the Shamrocks. Boy, that was war! Ask Art Ross. And do some of you remember the shindy between the two Cleghorns and Newsy Lalonde the night the present Toronto Arena opened in 1912? Newsie slashed Odie Cleghorn across the face. Brother Sprague jumped in and "beaned" Lalonde. After the game the pendulous collared Sprague and Newsie and they spent the night in the hoosegow.

We recall when Sprague and

BRUINS WIN IN OVERTIME BY 4 TO 3

New York, Jan. 2—In a desperate last minute rally, the Bruins, who were trailing the New York Rangers, 3 to 1, with only three minutes left to play, swept from behind, tied the score, and then went into an overtime period to snatch a 4-to-3 victory in one of the most thrilling hockey matches ever seen at the Garden.

Marty Barry, Bruin center, scored one of the two goals that tied the count, and passed to Dutch Gainor for the other.

Red Beattie made the winning tally on a fine unassisted play in less than two minutes of overtime play.

Jerwa put the Rangers ahead early in the third period when he drove a long shot from mid-ice that got past tiny Thompson, star Boston goalie, ther added a second unassisted goal 20 seconds later. Bun Cook scored the opening goal for the Rangers early in the second period while Gainor tied the count for the first time in the same frame.

After a scoreless first period, Bun Cook got the puck near the left boards on Boucher's pass and rifled a shot past Thompson for the first goal.

The Bruins bore down with the starting whistle for the third period and gave Goalie Roach a few very busy minutes.

Jerwa uncorked a drive from mid-ice and Thompson missed it completely and let an easy shot get past him. Right after the ensuing face off, Jerwa again scrubbed the puck. This time he skated down the left alley, catching the defense men flatfooted and again beat Thompson. The two goals were just 20 seconds apart.

Berry came out of the penalty box to score Boston's second goal with 2½ minutes to go. He got past the Ranger defense on Chapman's fine pass and burned a hard shot past Roach from a sharp angle.

With Owen off a minute later, he slipped a pass out of a crowd of Ranger defense players to Gainor, who had no one to hamper him as he beat Roach for the tying goal. The period ended a minute and a half later.

The Bruins started out to score as soon as possible in the overtime period and succeeded in less than two minutes. Getting the puck down in the corner behind the Ranger net, Beattie did a near hit of stuck-handling to carry it out in front of the goal, where, unhindered by defense men, he lifted a high shot past Roach.

Boston fell back on a defensive game, but Galbraith was caught for an anti-defense penalty. The Rangers charged in with four men, but were turned back by shots the length of the ice.

Dartmouth Easily Wins Sports Meet

Lake Placid Club, N. Y., Jan. 1—Dartmouth easily won the annual winter sports meet here with 33 points. New Hampshire was second with 16. McGill was third with 15 points, and Ottawa fourth with 10. It was Dartmouth's second successive win.

Army's hockey team, after two straight trimmings, finally defeated Williams, 3 to 1.

Points total for winter sports—Dartmouth 33, New Hampshire 16, McGill 15, Ottawa 10, Penn State 5, Clarkson 4, St. Olaf 2, and Williams, Northwestern and Maine, 1 each. Penn, St. Michaels and Bowdoin did not score.

White Plains Loses

Miami, Fla., Jan. 2 (US)—Blasted by a football hurricane, the White Plains, N. Y., high school eleven succumbed to the Florida All-Scholastic team, 30 to 0, here, as 11,000 spectators watched the intersectional schoolboy struggle.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE OF RING

JACK DORVAL, a man of dual personalities. Would you think this bewhiskered, tousled-haired, mackinaw-coated woodsman was the same fellow you saw knock out George Cook and Knute Hansen and beat Babe Hunt in the Boston Garden? Dorval lives deep in the heart of the Alleghenies. He comes out only to keep boxing engagements. After his bouts he waits only to collect his money and then back he goes to his mountain home to hunt and fish and keep up his backwoods farm until he sallies forth again to give another opponent ring battle. The three photos show Dorval in the ring, as he is in everyday life in the Alleghanies and a "bag" outside his cabin door. Five bucks and a bear. Not so bad—not so bad! And — whis-s-s-st — what's in them thar barrels? Gosh oh hemlock! Just think how a couple of slices of venison, broiled over wood coals would taste washed down with the amber brew methinks is in those barrels! Dorval's slogan certainly is "This is the life."

Alabama Passes Way to Win Over Washington State

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2 (US)—By defeating Washington State College, 1930 champions of the coast, 24 to 0, Coach Wallace Wade's Alabama Crimson tide retained the unbiemished record of the land of cotton and left the field having convinced 65,000 spectators that they rate second only to Notre Dame among the 1930 football teams of the land.

In previous meetings with southern teams the Pacific Coast has been able to do no better than tie, and three defeats, Alabama having previously defeated Washington University and tied Stanford, and Georgia Tech having conquered California.

Things happened fast in the second quarter. In this period Alabama scored three touchdowns more through deception than through power. The southern team held a lead of 21-0 at the end of the half.

The only scors made in the second half was a third period field goal, kicked from the 34-yard line by Whitworth, Alabama guard.

Alabama scored first when Moore, left end, took the ball on a reverse and flipped a 33-yard pass into the arms of Suther, Alabama's great half-back. There was not a Washington State man near him and he ran 30 yards to the first touchdown. Campbell, outstanding back in the game, added the extra point.

A few minutes later, Bington intercepted a Cougar pass on the Washington State 38-yard line. On second down Moore was again brought back and called upon to pass. The ball was caught by Smith, the other Alabama end, who reached up and took the pass out of the hands of Dahlen and Ellingsen on the Cougar one-yard line. On the first play Campbell took it over for a touchdown.

The third touchdown was scored when Moore dropped back and faked another one of his passes. The only trouble was that Moore never received the ball from center. It went to Campbell, who dodged through tackle and wheeled around the Cougar secondary and ran 42 yards to a touchdown.

Zeramby Wins Award Over Hanlon at Salem

Jake Zeramby of Lynn is today on the trail of Andy Callahan, New England lightweight champion as a result of his decisive victory over Johnny Hanlon, Lynn rival, in their holiday bout at the Salem A. A.

It was the second meeting between Zeramby and Hanlon and once more Jake finished out front.

Hanlon, although defeated, put up a hard battle. He made a particularly strong finish, but could not overcome the commanding lead Zeramby had piled up in the early stages of the battle.

Boston "Y" Loses

The Malden City Club quintet handed the Boston Y. M. C. A. its first defeat of the season on the home floor, 41 to 39, after two overtime periods of the greatest play ever seen at the Beaver st. gym.

Fitchburg Wins

Fitchburg, Jan. 2 — Fitchburg High came from behind twice in the last 20 seconds of play to defeat Brockton high, 28 to 27, at the B. F. Brown gymnasium before more than 1000 spectators.

PLAY EAGLES TOMORROW AT GARDEN

By BILL GRIMES

The Boston Tigers will try to climb out of the Can-Am League cellar at the expense of the New Haven Eagles at the Garden tomorrow night in the first Canadian-American League game of the New Year.

At the moment, the Canam cellar is being shared by these two rivals, both tied half a game behind Philadelphia, the team which finally ended Springfield's winning streak earlier this week. The winner of tomorrow's game will therefore go into third place.

Bill Grimes

The Tigers will take the ice tomorrow without any new players on their roster.

President George V. Brown has been in New York for the past three days trying to put through a deal with the Rangers.

He will return to town today and perhaps will announce the acquisition of some player. But the Tigers efforts to get Deacon Waite from the New York club have ended in failure. The New Yorkers who needed Cecil Dillon, the Canam's leading scorer, have taken him from Springfield, and sent Deacon to the Indians in the deal.

Tigers Trying Hard to Get New Players

Not only does this transaction leave the Tigers a man they were counting on, but it strengthens Springfield for the Indians needed a center forward more than they needed a winger. The Tigers still have hopes of landing Frank Peters, a fine defense man, from the Rangers, and may also be able to get Gene Carrigan, another substitute forward on the Ranger roster.

The Lions have added strength to their forward lines since they last played in Boston, and the New Haven team is still very much in the Canam battle. The New York Americans have sent Mike Neville to New Haven and he has given the Eagles two evenly balanced forward lines.

Doggy Kuhn, the Nova Scotian, has been promoted to the position of starting wing, with Burmeister and Conroy as his colleagues. That leaves the potent trio of Billy Boucher, Gene Chouinard, and Neville in reserve. Eddie Jeremiah, the former Dartmouth star, and the Somerville boy has worked his way into a starting defense position, and has been going great recently.

Manager Howard is also using Yip Radley, the Prime Carrera of hockey, more frequently, and he, too, has shown great improvement in New Haven's recent encounters.

Eagles and Tigers Have Won Two Each

The Eagles and the Tigers have played four games so far, breaking even. The Boston team won both the games played at New Haven, but have been unable to lick the team captained by Alain Forbes at the Garden. Boston has won by 2 to 1 and 3 to 2 and lost by 2 to 1 and 3 to 2.

One of the features of the battle on Thursday will be the duel between the rival goalies. Forbes has long been considered the class of the Canam goaltenders. But Benny Grant in his two games for the Tigers has made 84 stops and has well threaten Forbes' position.

200 Tee Off in Miami Open Tourney

Miami, Fla., Jan. 2 (INS)—A glittering field of more than 200 teed off here this morning in the seventh annual Miami open golf tournament. Gene Sarazen, the title-holder, did not enter the tournament.

The large field was headed by such luminaries in the golfing fraternity as Jock Hutchinson, former British open champion; Johnny Farrell, former open champion, and scores of others.

Godfrey to Fight Paulino in Mexico

Santa 'Cave Man' of Ring

PORTUGUESE DEFEATS ROBERTI

By JACK CONWAY

This Jose Santa, heavyweight champion of Portugal who defeated Roberto Roberti in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena, is this writer's idea of a modern caveman.

I got a peek at Santa in action for this first time in his tussle with Roberti. This six foot seven-inch giant, who scales 267 pounds, looks like a primitive caveman when he starts swinging his pendorous fists.

What is most impressive about Santa is the fact he does not back away from a punch. He takes a scale on the chin very good. A healthy wallop merely steams him up to the point where he wants to fight all the harder.

Jack Conway

If somebody could slip some of the old Dempsey dynamite into Santa's punches he would run quite a flock of heavyweight contenders. Jose has not yet mastered the art of proper footing. He punches a great deal with the open glove and also when off balance.

Santa does not care where he hits his opponent. If he cracks jaw and stomach are out of range he is just as satisfied to take a poke at the top of his head.

I agreed with the official decision which was in favor of Santa but quite a few of the cash customers failed to do so.

It was a strictly partisan crowd with the Santa rooters in the majority. The Roberti followers argued that the Italian landed the cleaner blows and excelled at long range boxing.

There is some logic to that argument. Roberti beat Santa's head bobbing back on numerous occasions under the power of his straight left hand thrusts. Santa tripped some crushing blows to the head and body as he moved forward.

Yet no matter how hard and often Roberti clouted Santa the Portuguese giant persisted in those quarters. Jose barraged with both hands. He was tireless in his attack, while at times Roberti looked rather weary.

Santa's best duke is his left. In the first frame he made Roberti sag under the power of a left hook to the body. Jose then almost tipped over the Italian with an ordinary right hand wallop to the chin.

Roberti fought back with great courage at all times. He also displayed plenty of resourcefulness when pressed back against the ropes. He terminated the experience and fighting best to stop the gigantic Santa by.

Roberti is quite a Man Mountain himself, standing six feet three inches in height and weighing 229 pounds.

It was a hard, tough fight all the way and will stand a repeat. Personally I would like to see Santa and Stanley Socznik the wrestler get together on a ring card which isn't too big or on a friendly plan. I would contribute real money to see what the outcome of such a match would be. Maybe I'd part with a small wager on Socznik who has always been my idea of a rough and tumble guy.

SANTA STILL SAT PRETTY AT END

MALONEY-RISKO FIGHT AGAIN

Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy, and Jim Maloney, pride of South Boston and now a resident of Wellington, have signed to fight a return match at the Boston Garden on January 12. It was announced today.

Since their furious fight of December 5, in which Risko walloped his way to a decision over the favored Maloney in a close struggle a return bout has been eagerly looked forward to and Rudy Ames new matchmaker at the depot ring, let the Dolores with one of his best bouts for Boston fans could hope for.

The previous Maloney-Risko affair in the Garden was one of the best in the city's annals in 1930. Maloney and Risko were even through it is said. The decision went to Risko but the decision was very close.

Maloney had signed for this bout in Miami and he suffered his first defeat after having Primo Carnera spill-dipped jaunty look but forward quite his great fight. Maloney has been signing for a return bout with Risko and Johnny was willing.

Mat Giants Clash at Garden

DUSEK CHOICE IN FEATURE BOUT

Complete Card at Garden

Rudy Dusek vs. Ivan Vakturof, Russian Bear, one fall to a finish.
Jim McMillen vs. George Hills, Wisconsin Lumberjack, 45 minutes.
Flyin Wilcox, Oklahoma Indian, vs. Joe Chaplin of New York.
Gino Garibaldi, Italian Giant, vs. George Manish, Jugo-Slav.
Pat O'Shocker vs. John Maxos, Greek Idol.
Frank Brunowicz vs. Karl Pojello, Lithuanian champion.
Last four matches all 30-minute limit.

By RINGSIDE

Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark. is a favorite to win over Ivan (The Great) Vakturof of Russia in their one fall match at Ray Fabiani's wrestling show at the Boston Garden tonight.

Dusek defeated Milo Steinbach at the opening mat show at the Garden. In that contest he displayed enough ability to warrant the fans making him a choice over Vakturof.

Dusek is a good wrestler, while he also furnishes the fans with plenty of rough milling. Mat fans like their action and are usually strong for the wrestler who does not mind bouncing through the ropes and landing on his head out on the floor of the arena.

If Dusek dispases of Vakturof, he will probably be signed to meet Jim Londos in a bout at the Garden.

Jim McMillen Tackles Rugged George Hills

Jim McMillen, former University of Illinois star, will have George Hills, Wisconsin lumberjack, as an opponent in a 45-time limit match. McMillen has been coming to the front at a lively clip. He recently scored victories over Dick Shikat and Hans Bauer. He is picked to win tonight.

McMillen, like Sonnenberg and Ed George, uses the flying tackle. He carries the thrills of the football field into the wrestling game.

In the event that neither McMillen nor Hills score a fall in 45 minutes, a decision will be rendered by two judges and the referee. There will also be decisions in the other time limited matches.

Tom Masters, Indian wrestler, has been taken ill and will be unable to meet Karl Pojello, Lithuanian champion. His place will be taken by Frank Brunowicz, the Pole

Gino Garibaldi, Italian giant, will tackle George Munish, Jugo-Slav. Pat O'Shocker, Irish-American wrestler, will battle John Maxos, Greek, while Firpo Wilcox, Indian grappler, will have Joe Chaplin of New York as an opponent.

Tilden Wins From Lott in Exhibition

Philadelphia, Jan. 2 (US)—Big Bill Tilden, who has decided to retire from amateur tennis competition and enter the movies, celebrated New Year's by defeating George M. Lott, Jr., in a singles exhibition at the Penn A. C. by the scores of 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

Before a crowded auditorium of 2500 persons, Tilden won the first set with comparative ease, was hard pressed but won the second and then eased up a bit as the former Chicago lad and Davis Cup team player captured the third set.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER MORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

At exactly the point where the limit of your left-arm reach is attained, and with your head and body held so still that at this particular point you have returned virtually to your address position, is the point in your forward swing where you attain the maximum of centrifugal force. This, therefore, is precisely the point at which you should seek to make your clubhead meet the ball and take it away. At this point you should have a feeling that everything swings off the point of your left shoulder—arms, hands and the club swinging from that center. Now a few practice swings on this order should quickly reveal to you just why it is that undue force and the application of great physical power should be avoided. You cannot mix those things with any effort to swing the club smoothly through. Get the idea of centrifugal force, which is more steam-like, being smooth; a stored-up energy, in a way, released with at-only-accelerating power, which in this case means a smooth swing.

(Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

WIPING OUNCES AWAY

Babe Ruth has already begun to get into condition for his 1931 home run campaign. His daughter Julia is shown wiping away the extra ounces that drip from the Bam's brow as he trots along on the running machine at a New York gymnasium.

Runyon Greatly Impressed by New Mat Champion

By DAMON RUNYON

There appeared at my door the other evening, a young man of such alarming physical proportions that I had some thought of first calling a cop and then ascertaining the young man's mission later.

He was a wide young man, and a powerfully built young man, yet withal a handsome young man with black hair, and black brows, and a square cut jib, and when he smiled I felt greatly relieved. It was a friendly smile. In a general way the young man suggested William Harrison Dempsey, the celebrated Manassa Man Mauler, when William was a young man — or anyway, younger than he is now.

Damon Runyon

All right, you say, who was the young man?

Well, it turned out that he was none other than Edward Don George, the new heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, conqueror of the redoubtable Gus Sonnenberg, the former Dartmouth student, of the famous bully goat lungs.

The same Edward Don George who astounded the grappling grubs of the land by his unexpected victory over Gus out in Los Angeles on December 10. Since the wrestling game has suddenly dazzled our populace to the extent of turning away thousands from the door of Madison Square Garden, it is well to be informed on these exponents of the manly art of pull-and-haul. I was therefore greatly interested in my young caller.

He is about as fine a specimen of young manhood as you would care to clap eyes on and is the youngest man to win the mat title. He is just 25. A wrestler of that age, it seems, is practically an infant. Some of them live until they forget their years.

George Is Product of St. Bonaventure's

This Don George was little known in the effete East before he beat the pudgy Dartmouther, yet, oddly enough, he is a New York Stater, born and raised. He comes from the town of North Java, just outside Buffalo, and is a product of St. Bonaventure College of Olean, N. Y. the Alma Mater of John J. McGraw, chief of the Giants, and of the late Rugby Jennings. George played football at Bonaventure, but he gained his greatest collegiate athletic fame as a wrestler at the University of Michigan.

It is somewhat ironical that George is not recognized as the title holder in his own state. This heavyweight wrestling title is a little bit confusing to a mere bystander, but Sonnenberg won it from Strangler Lewis, who in turn beat Joe Stecher, the Nebraska Cornhusker. In New York, Jim Londos, the Greek, is recognized as champion.

Londos is a sort of decree champion. He beat one Richard Shikat, who had been recognized as champion by the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission, and the New York Commission concurred in the recognition. It is the only thing ever done by the Pennsylvania commission that the New Yorkers concurred in, and I doubt if there is any record of anything done by the New York commission being approved by the Pennsylvanians.

Anyway, you pays your money, and you takes your choice of the Stecher-to-Lewis-to-Sonnenberg-to-George title, or the Pennsylvania-New York decree. I am no expert on these matters.

George Is an Expert on Use of Grammar

This youthful champion, George, is quiet, and modest, and he shows in his conversation that the time he spent at the University of Michigan did him no harm, anyway. He uses about the best grammer of any athlete I ever encountered, but don't take that as too much of a boost I have known some athletes who habitually said "does" for "doe" and "dem," but who were artists in action.

George is six feet tall and weighs 218 pounds. He has been wrestling professionally about a year and a half and has had about 43 bouts. He lost just one, that to Sonnenberg, the man he was to later beat for the championship.

Before turning pro, he was wrestling champion of the University of Michigan, A. A. U. champion in 1928 and 1929 and a member of the American Olympic Team in 1928. He lost in the Olympic wrestling to a Swede. He was a substitute guard on the Michigan varsity football squad, but played little. He got three letters for wrestling at Michigan, and is accounted one of Ann Arbor's prise all-time athletes.

He coached the wrestling team at Bonaventure for a while, so all in all he has had about seven years of the game. He is of German-French parentage and has two brothers and two sisters. His family still lives at North Java. His favorite "hold" is called the Wolverine slam, which sounds exciting enough.

WINTHROP VS. BOEHM IN FINAL

Miss Hilda Boehm, one of the famous tennis twins from Malden, will meet Miss Katherine Winthrop of Boston in the final match of the national indoor junior tennis championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's indoor court tomorrow morning at 9:45.

Both girls smashed their way into the title bracket by overcoming their semi-final opponents in their matches at Chestnut Hill played this morning.

Miss Boehm eliminated Miss Mary Cutter of Winchester in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, but had to display her very best tennis to win.

Miss Winthrop's victory was something of a surprise. She conquered Miss Mary Whittemore of Dublin, N. H., in three fast and furious sets, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5. Miss Whittemore had been seeded second in the tournament and Miss Winthrop fourth.

Miss Boehm is favored to annex the junior title tomorrow and succeed to the throne formerly occupied by Sarah Palfrey, who has reached the age limit in junior net play.

Miss Winthrop, however, is a fighting type of player and one who may surprise with an upset without serving notice. Her competitive qualities should extend the match to the limit, although Miss Boehm's slight superiority in stroking and her general all-round court play should carry her through to the title.

JUNIOR SUMMARY

Semi-Final Results

Miss Hilda Boehm defeated Miss Cutter, 6—3, 6—3.

Miss Katherine Winthrop defeated Miss Mary Whittemore, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5.

First-Round Doubles

Rosalind Badaracco and Carlotta Baker defeated Alice Jacks and Alice Jenks, 6—4, 6—3.

Quater-Final Doubles

Mary Whittemore and Katherine Winthrop defeated Mary Fowle and Sally Jones, 6—3, 7—5.

Hilda and Helen Boehm defeated Louise and Dorothy Harding, 6—2, 6—4.

Harvard Six Wins From McGill, 3-2

Fort Erie, Ont., Jan. 2—Harvard defeated McGill University hockey club here 3 to 2, in a battle which was not decided until the last 75 seconds of play.

Harvard scored twice in the initial session. Wood got the first counter on a solo rush and Saltonstall notched the second on a pass from Baldwin.

The Red and White came back strong in the second period and tallied twice. Jack McGill got the first on a long shot and also scored again when he caged Crutchfield's pass.

Baldwin broke from the blue line and by pretty stick handling slipped the disk past Fowers for the winning counter.

Fall River Victor Over Wanderers

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 2—Fall River tightened its hold on first place in the American League standing by defeating Brooklyn Wanderers, 3 to 0, at Hawthorne field before 2500.

All three goals were scored in the second half.

Fall River must win one of its remaining two games here over the weekend, against Hakoah tomorrow or against Newark Americans on Sunday, to clinch the championship for the first half of the season, which ends on Sunday.

Noted Soloists to Feature the Broadcast Heard Tonight at 10

The first radio program under the auspices of the Columbia Concerts Corporation, newly formed through the merger by the CBS of seven of the largest concert bureaus in America will be presented over a wide CBS network, including WNAC, from 10 to 11 p. m. tonight.

Soloists who will be heard on this first program are Florence Easton, soprano; Sophie Braslau, contralto; Nelson Eddy, baritone, and Ernest Hutcheson, pianist. The Agustin Lulo quartet of Madrid, which made its debut in New York November 10 after a 21-week tour of South America, will also be heard. A symphony orchestra under the direction of Joseph Pasternack will supply instrumental music.

Weekly concerts fashioned along the lines of the first are being planned for broadcast by the Columbia Concerts Corporation. Future concerts will be heard regularly from 10.30 to 11 p. m., Wednesdays.

Hutcheson, who is piano soloist on tonight's program, was born in Australia where he toured extensively before reaching the age of ten. He studied in Germany and subsequently toured England and Russia as a pianist and conductor. He now devotes his time to concert recitals.

Sophie Braslau, who is often referred to as "the Schumann-Heink of the younger generation," was born and educated in New York city. She has been associated with the Metropolitan Opera company.

Florence Easton was born in England and studied at the London Royal Academy of Music. Both her parents were concert singers Until last year she was a member of the Metropolitan Opera company.

Nelson Eddy, baritone, was born in Providence, R. I. He has gained considerable experience in opera and the concert stage.

Radio Soloist

FLORENCE EASTON, former dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who will be a soloist on the premiere Columbia Concerts Corporation program tonight at 10 o'clock over WNAC.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

Some wise, philosophical person once stated that "only by the past may we judge the future," or words to that effect. There is a great element of truth in what that line signifies, yet it cannot apply to every phase of human activity; and radio is one item on the list whose future cannot be prophesied because it has practically no past to judge it by.

Radio broadcasting, however, does not need a past whereby to gauge its future; it needs no seer to gaze ahead into the coming 12 months and predict a great expansion in the industry. Even the most thoughtless, should they care to step and give the matter consideration, would readily declare there are big things brewing in the realm of radio.

It is worthy of note that no important broadcasting affiliate has ever recently added to their service a daily flash of current happenings in the radio world. To the best of our knowledge even the gigantic movie industry has never received such individual attention.

Only in the short months since the announcement that some one of the big chain broadcasting companies will arranged to receive and retransmit over their network a broadcast originating in Europe would have been given a space on the front pages of our newspapers. Today it has ceased to have become important enough to receive such distinction.

An AP dispatch has before us with the information that Dr. Wilhelm Miklas, President of Austria, is to address America direct from the governmental palace in Vienna this month. The Columbia System network has completed plans to extend its weekly overseas broadcasts outside of London to include many of the capitals of Europe. The first of several pickups, that of Dr. Miklas, is set for 12:30 P. M. (EST), January 21.

Briefly, that gives us some idea of the big start we are getting away to for the coming year and that is only one of the many items at hand which point to the great things that are to develop in radio. Perhaps before 1932 rolls into place television will have become practical, and of a certainty are that time "electrical transmission" will be a very great factor in broadcasting. Certainly we are destined for numerous epoch-making changes in entertainment of the ether.

Are We Slow, or What?

You figure it out; we have a sore finger. An edict from Ripley last Tuesday informed us as follows:

Radio fans who tune in on WGY at nine o'clock tomorrow morning (Wednesday, Dec. 30) will hear the New Year's celebration from Melbourne, Australia, 15 hours in advance of similar celebrations in this country. When it is nine o'clock here (Wednesday) it will be midnight, December 31, in Melbourne.

Wish we had space to reprint for the benefit of you subscribers the very nice and instructive letter sent us by Jr. V. Pettibone of Worcester. There is a person who knows his radio; also is undoubtedly a follower of the column which, of course, is all right with us. For the benefit of Jr. V. P. be it known that Les Barnard, one time radio editor on this newspaper, is very much alive and kicking—emphasis on the "kicking."

"What's this! Can it be possible that the keen rivalry between NBC and CBS has extended to their announcers' staff? It would look that way. The NBC folks have been boasting for some time of the number of inches their announcer, Howard Peirie, extends toward the roof—6 feet 4 inches. That was too much for CBS so they have annexed to their announcers' staff Larry Harding, late of Washington, who looks down upon ordinary mortals from a height of 6 feet 6 inches. There you are, NBC, beat that, darn you.

She Quit Husband as He Killed Her Cat

—By BEATRICE FAIRFAX—

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I suppose you've never had a letter like this before, and it may even seem funny to you, but it's anything but funny to me. I am 28 years old, my husband is 40. We have been married several years and have no children. My husband is away from home a good deal and I depend very much for companionship on my pet cat, Mouser. He was a kitten that grew up in my old home. My husband is a very violent temper and one day last week accused me of giving away an old hat of his—but I did not. To spite me, he killed Mouser most cruelly. I suppose you'll think it strange that this should make a great difference in my feeling for him, but it has. A day or two after Mouser's death, he found his hat—then he gave me a ching cat and seemed to think that the breach was healed. At present I am with my mother and do not feel like returning to my husband.

Beatrice Fairfax

MADGE J. K

Dear Madge: I suppose it might seem funny to a good many people that you've taken the death of Mouser so much to heart, but not to me, as I happen to like cats enormously, and I think you showed good judgment to pay a little visit to your mother till the worst of your "mad" wore off. It's better to visit for a while than to stay at home and have a fit of stony sulks or rage, or refuse to talk. After a little time, I think you'll feel differently and be willing to go back to your husband. And I should provide myself with another cat.

Fate Turned the Tables

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am in an awful mess, and don't know how to get out. Seeing you have helped so many others in trouble, I hope you can help me. When I first started going with my girl friend, she knew many boys whom I had never met. Often, just as a joke, we would ring up these boys and kid them along. My girl friend always had me ring up, although I never liked to do it. Well, at one time, I rang up one of the boys, strung him along, got him angry, and I hung up. Now, fate turned the tables, when I met this boy at a dance and he recognized my voice and by that time remembered my name. I told him I had something to tell him, and would only do it if we were alone. A few nights later he called me up, but we were entertaining, so I told him I could not tell him then He was angry and hung up. A long time has passed, and still I have not heard from him. Should I write a friendly note containing an apology, or shall I call him up, start the same thing?

PERPLEXED.

Dear Perplexed: Say to the young man the next time you happen to meet that you were just indulging in a silly prank when you called him over the phone the first time, and that any apologizing, Girls cheapen themselves by foolish promiscuous phoning to boys with whom they are not acquainted. And one or two have got themselves into serious trouble, for example, a girl called up an important young man with whom she was not acquainted and hoped to be. It happened her own brother was there and answered the phone. He recognized his sister's voice and disguised his own. Then the irate brother went home and had a session with their father, the result of which was that sister was taken from the very pleasant day school she was attending and placed in the strictest convent school in Canada.

Shall She Take His Arm?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Please give me a little advice I am a girl of 26 years and have a boy friend who is two older than I, and I think a good deal of him. Is it wrong if we walk arm in arm in public? I think it is right. Could you please tell me if it is right or wrong?

N. P

Dear N. P.: There is nothing wrong in taking a man's arm but there is a question of what is and what is not done. In these days of independent womanhood, when girls pride themselves on being athletic and able to hold their own with any man, nature asserts itself. It regarded as just a weak old fashioned to take a man's arm during the day. When the shades of evening descend you can—if you're determined to take his arm—but I think you'll see the way better than you can. Taking a man's arm on all occasions harks back to the days when it was rather the thing for a girl to faint and be more or less of an invalid. But that pose is out of date today.

Food Elements Essential in Building Strong Teeth

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

IN OUR childhood we were told, and perhaps for a time believed, that:

"Crusts will make your hair curl.

"Crusts will make you strong.

"Crusts will cure the stomachache.

"If eaten right mong."

Some of the present-day claims of dietitians may seem just as far-fetched, but fortunately for us, they have a more scientific basis than the conclusions of the old nursery rhyme. For example, every day more and more evidence is being accumulated to prove that good teeth depend almost wholly on proper diet.

For many years dentists and doctors, health and school officials, have laid great emphasis on the proper cleansing of the teeth. We have been taught how and when to brush the teeth and massage the gums, what kind of a brush to use, what paste or powder to put on it, why dental floss is necessary and what mouth-wash to employ. And we have been trained to make semi-annual trips to the dentist to have him repair the damage that has taken place

Now we are being taught that unless the diet is correct all the physical care that can be given the teeth will not preserve them. But, on the other hand if the diet is correct, the dentist's examination will usually more often than not show that all is well.

Damage to the teeth comes primarily from within. The teeth fail to form properly or their substance breaks down because of a lack of the proper food elements to build them up and make them strong and resistant.

What are these elements that take part in the building of teeth? The most important ones are lime, phosphorus, and the substance known as vitamin D.

To secure these elements the diet should contain fresh fruits and vegetables, but more important than anything else, it should contain an adequate amount of milk

A quart of milk a day by itself would supply all the vitamin D needed by an adult. For babies and children it is the chief source of this important element, and should never be omitted from the diet.

What's in Fashion?

Lower Heels on Simpler Shoes

—Directed by AMOS PARRISH—

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 Going d-o-w-n! That means something else besides the elevator. It means the heels of street shoes.

How do you know that? We know it because of the constant check-up we keep on shoes that fashionable women wear. And by comparisons of these check-ups taken also during the past year.

Last year at this time, for example, the Cuban was the most popular heel for a street shoe. The high heel gained second and the high-low heel third

The Cuban, as you can see in the second illustration, is a fairly high, straight, solid heel. The high heel is a high, slender, curved heel, as shown in the third sketch. The high-low heel is a curved heel, too, but lower than the high heel, and with a comfortable, more solid base Two are shown, in the top and bottom drawings.

Oxford with Cuban heel

High-Low First

Our show check-ups made this month of this year show that the high-low heel—third at this time last year—has gained first place by a fraction. Right now, figures show, it is almost twice as popular as the Cuban heel.

The Cuban rates about as it did, but the high heel—the highest one of the three—has dropped by a large proportion.

What does this mean? It means that the fashion of appropriateness has affected shoes, as it has every other part of the costume. For fashion-knowing women realize that the very high, slender heel is not as appropriate for formal afternoon or evening costumes.

The high-low heel is graceful It has the same easy curve of the high heel. But it's more comfortable. Its wider base gives better support to the foot and makes it easier to walk with a sure natural step. All of which helps make the entire costume smarter.

Some interesting things have happened to the types of shoes fashionable women are wearing The shoes that are simpler in line are being seen more and more on fashionable avenues

One year at this time the one-strap shoe was far and away the most popular for street wear The oxford was next and the opera last

These shoes still stand in the same rank on Fifth Ave. But the opera pump the simplest one of the three has greatly increased in popularity The oxford holds its own And the one-strap has dropped even more than the opera has increased

Is there a reason for this? Yes there is for every fashion! And it's the fashion for the per sonal costume that's making this change in shoes.

Shoes Inconspicuous

Shoes—stockings—gloves—have their part in the ensemble but their role is an inconspicuous one They must blend into the background and not draw attention to themselves or make spots that break the line flowing lines of the costume as a whole.

The opera pump (shown at the top) is the simplest shoe there is It can be worn with all sorts of costumes. It helps lengthen the figure, as the fashionable figure should be lengthened. There's nothing to break the line of the foot

And nowadays the opera pump is made better than it used to be, so more people find they can wear it comfortably.

The oxford (second illustration) is a sone of simple, unbroken lines too. It's good in the ensemble. And it's a warm shoe for winter street wear—appropriate

Custom of Leaving Food

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

I have been in the habit of [illegible] and I have noticed that [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the way.

L. H

Yes, this custom thoroughly [illegible] was the fashion of [illegible] and [illegible] the way. It never was in fashion in Europe, for there food is not regarded as [illegible] as it is on this side of the ocean. And indeed [illegible] should be [illegible] and that [illegible] and [illegible] with care and [illegible] It was during the war [illegible] that [illegible] in this country how [illegible] and how [illegible] of [illegible] our [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] ...

The Courteous Gentleman

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

1. When a gentleman is with a lady and they meet a friend of hers, lady or gentleman, he must raise his hat whether he knows this person or not, isn't it so?

2 And a gentleman meeting a friend of his accompanying a lady must raise his hat?

MISTER MOUSE

1 Yes always This is the gesture of honor and compliment that he pays to the woman whom he is accompanying, and to the person whom they meet

2 Yes—always

Introducing the Fiance

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

What is the correct way for a girl in introducing a man who is engaged to to her friends?

M. L.

To a woman she may introduce him like this: "Miss Graham, may I present my fiance, Mr. Gregory" or "Miss Graham, this is my fiance, Mr. Gregory."

To a man, "Mr Alexander may I introduce Mr. Gregory" or Mr. Alexander, Mr Gregory.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Three Sisters---And "Dame Fortune"

By WINIFRED BLACK

THEY WALKED into the waste band in hand the other. In the three old women, and then they kissed each other goodbye and [illegible] and [illegible] washed over them and their poor, discouraged, tired old hearts were still

Winifred Black

Poor things Poor, tired unhappy, frightened things—and they was all about nothing, too Or about money — and the fear of losing it—and if that isn't worse than nothing, what is?—I ask you

They were three sisters, the poor old souls, who couldn't face the world any longer Three sisters who had been rather well to do and looked up to and respected by their friends and neighbors

They had a nice old fashioned house set in a nice old-fashioned garden and they had a nice conservative little income which gave them a new "best dress" every year and a perfectly good hat splece for fall and summer and a roast chicken for Sunday dinner and maybe an egg apiece for breakfast every day of their quiet, frugal lives

But somebody or another they knew bought stock and "got rich"

Oh, as rich as mud

They were so rich that they went over to Europe and saw buried cities and castles and peasants and cream-colored oxen with big, velvety purple eyes and soft dewlaps like the pictures in the fancy book the Sunday School teacher used to have.

The queen wore her hat "kind of funny" and the king wasn't as handsome as they hoped he would be but still [illegible] saw them with their own eyes and came home and told the neighbors about them and made speeches at the church socables and every time they had a eflance they said, "It doesn't rain like this in London," or "I never snooped in a place we were in Italy," till everybody wished they had never been abroad at all

He bought stock and made a fortune and he went right down to the city to live and rented an apartment with a polished floor and Persian rugs and a $200 radio and an electric ice box. And he went to the pictures every night and thought no more of stepping into a restaurant after the pictures and ordering a teabone steak and French fried potatoes, as grand as you please, than you would think of opening your door and walking into your own house

And the wife bought a fur coat and long dancing earrings that cost—goodness knows what! And it really did seem too bad to go through the whole of your life, without a fur coat or a pair of dangling earrings or a limousine or anything at the time old sisters put a mortgage on their house and put their money in stocks. The stocks went down and instead of being rich the three sisters were poor and they were afraid of age and illness and they couldn't bear to think of the old house where they had lived for 40 years going into the hands of strangers—and so they waded out into the water, hand in hand—and died

BROKEN RAINBOWS -:- By May Christy

tions to her mother. "Lorma Latour is setting her cap at Mr. Gordon. He likes to be with you. You don't get the situation a bit," she had pointed out to her mother.

"Nonsense, Wilda. I look on Robert Gordon only as a friend—"

"Why, that was just what I said to you about Arturo—and you thought me silly for it."

Gisele reddened. She knew what Wilda was thinking. And there was a certain parallel in their mutual situation . .

Arturo and Rob Gordon both reputed to be rich . . . yet Wilda clung to the memory of Logan, while she went everywhere with Gigi Cortes . . .

Both were "ineligibles"!

But Gigi was so handsome and so charming, and his love making so delicious! He danced divinely, too . . . knew everybody . . . had such lovely manners . . . and was so decorative!

Lorma Is Fifty

Wilda Told Gracie

He'd work for her, if they were man and wife. He had sworn he would, if Gracie would but marry him.

"You really think that Lorma cares for Robert Gordon?" Gracie had inquired. She seemed rather startled at the suggestion.

"Not for a moment! Lorma cares for nobody on God's green earth but her own pussycat security!" Wilda had averred. "And because she's fifty if a day, and lived hard, and getting older and poorer every minute, she wants to sail right into a safe haven. And though I don't trust her further than I can see her in her unfortunate circumstances, you can hardly blame the woman!"

Gracie had long, intimate talks in the hotel with Lorma Latour

Gracie had engaged a suite. At $25 a day.

Lorma was poor She hated the comparatively cheap pension which was all she could afford

When Gracie arrived at Cap d'Antibes and put up at the same smart hotel as Robert Gordon, Lorma had suspected Gracie's motive, and been furiously jealous of the other woman.

Gracie had come here to get "get next" Robert? Lorma imagined. Although no shrik, he was a matrimonial catch . . . and generous, into the bargain, And sentimental thought of Gracie in the "long ago" had apparently revived in him.

Lorma was wrong in her conjecture. The fool woman—incredible as it might seem—had actually fallen for the meretricious charms of Gigi Cortes! Gigi, whose love affairs were perfectly notorious!

Well, that suited Lorma's book okay. She wouldn't enlighten her so-called friend as to Gigi's real character.

All right, if a woman was rich, to amuse herself pro tem. But poor, stupid Gracie who 'taking her "affaire du coeur" seriously!

And the private parlor she had hired for the three weeks was not for the benefit of worthwhile Robert Gordon, Lorma soon discovered, but for Gigi Cortes'

Well, some women were certainly poor blind fools!

But Lorma listened to Gracie's confidences anent Gigi . . . coy, even encouraged the widow's sentimental outbursts

"The boy's evidently crazy about you, dear. Has he—I—spoken of marriage?"

"Yes." A blush rose to the widow's cheek. "But it's too soon yet—and of course, no matter what he says, there is quite a difference in our—ages."

"Nonsense. You look as much of a kid as Wilda, in those pajamas. Besides, it's fashionable to have a husband who's a whole lot younger than oneself."

"Not a bit of it. You take my tip, and grab your happiness."

Soon after that, Gigi had to go suddenly north to Paris. For a few days only. But when he asked Gracie to accompany him, she was taken aback

He saw his tactical error

"Then you'll write me every day? Sweet letters?"

"You want letters?" she asked wistfully. "You really care if I write?"

"I shall only live to hear from you," he answered passionately

She told Lorma Latour about it when Gigi had departed

For only an unrealful second, Lorma's shrewd eyes narrowed

Why didn't you go?" She could see through Gigi's maneuver perfectly. To have his fare paid...his hotel bills paid, by the infatuated widow. At the same time, hopelessly to compromise her

"Why, Lorma, it wouldn't be—proper."

Silly Fly

Walking Into Web

And Gracie blushed asnm... while Lorma thought of the rhyme about the silly fly walking right into the web of the spider

"He's made me promise not to go out alone with any other man while he's away. And Bob Gordon 'phoned half an hour ago and asked me if I'd dine with him tonight in that restaurant they call the 'Colombe d Or,' up in the mountains," said Gracie

Complete Kit to Enhance Beauty for the Dance

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

DID YOU ever see so many lovely compacts as there on display at present? It seems that every color, size and shape combination possible has been brought into use to beautify the containers in which we carry the finishing touches for our beauty.

Josephine Huddleston

The small and large types of compacts are being displayed in shops handling toilet accessories, and I'd like to tell you about some of those I've seen, and, perhaps, help you make a selection

The only drawbacks to the large type of compact is its size, although it certainly is nice to have lipstick, powder and rouge all in one case. Many of these very large compacts have a chain attachment with a loop at the end, which slips over the finger This type of compact is marvelously convenient to carry make-up in while dancing . . . BUT . . . the cases are not nearly as feminine, and attractive in appearance as the smaller ones, the large cases being available, almost without exception, in only a plain silver finish. Of course, they would be frightfully expensive if done in enamel and this may account for the plainness of their finish Many of these compacts keep the old "turning" type of watch, which our grandfathers once displayed so proudly, although they are somewhat thicker

Among the small compacts a new size is gaining wide popularity, although two cases are required, one for rouge and one for powder. These two compacts are about one inch wide and 2½ inches long and a scant inch. The oblong shape of the powder and the round one is for rouge. Of course the cases are matched, and they come in all of the fashionable shades of enamel finish, with cunning little figures in relief on the one-tone background

This particular baby-type of compact seems more suitable than the larger ones to me, but only because the coloring and designs are irresistible. Of course they are not as convenient as the large ones, which contain, in one case, all of the make-up necessary for use away from home

Probably some such plan as using the large compacts with a finger attachment for dancing, and the smaller ones, which can be carried in one's purse at other times will, eventually, work out Most certainly the dangling type of compact, which really is a vanity case, isn't appropriate for street or informal use because the appearance of the case isn't compatible with handbags carried at those times.

Home Hints

IF DELICATE lingerie is required in a hurry, and no starch can be had dip the article or garment into fresh milk and press in the usual way. This gives the material the desired stiffness

Wear loose hats containing tiny air-holes Hard hats are often the cause of early baldness Shoes should be roomy and fairly low-heeled

The greatest care is necessary when washing velvet. First prepare a warm, soapy lather with soapflakes of some neutral brand and boiling water softened with a little borax. Plunge the article or garment into this solution, taking care that it is thoroughly immersed, then allow to soak for about an hour

When cooking cauliflower, soak it for 15 minutes, head down in cold water to which 1 teaspoon of salt has been added. This soaking will draw out any insects lurking in the vegetable.

Rushed to the Altar Before the Man Knows It

By HELEN ROWLAND

FEW MEN know, when they find themselves standing at the altar, just how they GOT there

Few girls know, when they wake up from "love's young dream," just how they came to be married. Only the girl knows—and she won't tell

The truth is that they have been RUSHED into it, while they were in a sentimental coma or a momentary delirium, or otherwise off their guard. Marriage is always a surprise to a man—like a blow in the dark or a telegram at midnight. It is always SO sudden!

This is because marriage was the last thing in the world that he was THINKING about!

A girl begins thinking about marriage as soon as she is old enough to put up a doll's house and "play lady." It is never a surprise to HER But a man never thinks about marriage seriously until he finds himself buying coal and carpet-sweepers and baby-shoes. (Not even the ring!) Then, before he knows what's what, he's up!) And then it is too LATE to think!

Or, if he does think of marriage at all, it isonly vaguely and academically, as something that may happen to other men, but will never occurs to him that marriage can possibly happen to HIM, before he is ready for it or before he wants to marry.

He visualizes himself as an eternal bachelor or an eternal lover, but never as a plodding husband. That is why it is so easy for almost any woman with a little tact and a wedding ring in view to blindfold him and rush him to the altar, before he knows where he is going

If the average man would think more about marriage, beforehand, he would not do so much heavy thinking, after the wedding. If a man looked long around and see how many of his buddies have, one by one, slipped quietly out of the ranks of the wild single-footers, and into double-harness, he would be more wary and a less cocksure of his immunity

Because, marriage DOES happen to nearly all men, sooner or later—usually a lot sooner than they expected or intended. Why leave it to chance or to the accident or the maneuvering of a young woman?

But to gamble on beating the engine to the crossing is a safe and sane thing, beside gambling on a life-partner

Because you can DIE in a minute—but a bad marriages sometimes lasts a LIFETIME!

In This Spirit Enter New Year -And You'll Win

America's Biggest Fortunes Were Founded During Times of Stress

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Jan. 2.—What built up America? What raised this land of ours to the industrial and financial supremacy of the world?

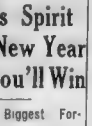
No!

It was that courage, that sturdy fearlessness, that spirit of daring which animated the Mayflower voyagers. They were true pioneers. Succeeding generations proved worthy of such forbears. The nation was enriched by virile blood from self-reliant Holland, from industrious, frugal Scotland, from an oppressed Ireland later from Germany, from Scandinavia, and other worthy European stocks.



B. C. Forbes

This same ambition, which moved them to leave home and kindred and to cross the then wide Atlantic Ocean, animated them to do and dare in the land of their adoption. No continent was ever so aggressively, so courageously, so enthusiastically, so efficiently and fearlessly cultivated, developed and conquered as ours. No danger was great enough to daunt our ancestors. No obstacle was too great to be overcome. Westward, ever Westward, they went, conquering field and forest, bridging rivers, first scaling and then tunneling mountains, sinking mines and, finally, spanning the continent with steel rails. They proved themselves men, he-men and women in those days.

• • •

What has become of leadership and leaders?

The sad truth is that since the collapse of the reckless boom in speculation there has been a timidity which characterized our great figures of the past have been lamentably lacking. The whole country is ruled, not by politicians, but by men of far-flung affairs, by financiers, by industrialists, by business men, by bankers. Therefore effective leadership must spring from these sources.

• • •

• • •

Our most prominent capitalists, our most colossal corporations, the heads of our largest financial institutions allowed depression and unemployment to go from bad to worse without giving convincing demonstration that they were exerting themselves to the utmost to stay the down trend and to set in motion activities calculated to bring the return of full-time employment and prosperity.

• • •

Are our so-called leaders of today aware that the majority of America's greatest fortunes were founded in times exactly like these?

Rockefeller told me that he built up Standard Oil by buying properties during times of panic when others wanted to stand from under unprofitable—but little known—concerns forsook him one by one whenever the steel industry became acutely unprofitable—but little known did not run away. Henry Clay Frick, then a young man, fearlessly borrowed money and bought square miles of coke lands during the terrific panic of 1873 and in a few years his profits exceeded a million dollars a year. Not only did Woolworth's first store fail, but three out of the first five he opened had to be abandoned. Similar instances galore could be cited, instances where the exercise of unflinching courage led to fame and fortune.

• • •

It has been said that the difference between a thoroughbred horse and a scrub is that a scrub goes until it can't go another mile, whereas the thoroughbred goes until it can't go another mile—and then goes that other mile.

America never yet has had a spell of depression from which it did not arise stronger and more prosperous than before. America will come from this time of stress and more prosperous than ever. Don't doubt that.

• • •

The thing in America today is not stock market, not wheat, not cotton, is not sugar, is not rubber, is not iron, is not rubber. The thing in America today is our mind.

• • •

The rich re- tomorrow will come, not those who are now wilting, not those who are sowing the wild oats per, but those who have laid vision and confidence en- buckle to the job, to grit their and forge unswervingly ahes.

Winners will pro- to be those who have the ma- the forecasts side to say "Dam- ," and then all steam ahead!

SMYRNA FIRM IS N. E. BUYER SINCE 1790

By FRANK H. MELDON

Dr. Julius Klein, assistant Secretary of Commerce, writes me regarding his recent trip through the Near East, and one paragraph of his account will be of special interest. Dr. Klein says

"You will be interested to know that in Smyrna I ran across a firm whose predecessors in a direct line had been doing business with the Cabots of New England back in 1790. No wonder New England has been preparing for us even in that part of the world."

• • •

The Smyrna firm, "Hadji Bey & Son in Boston," despite world-wide changes, is still going strong. Even a family which did not arrive quite as early in the May-flower may have a valuable line of descendants in the course of a century. Any genealogist can assure you so. It may be that the Smyrna firm will find trading now and then with those who might trace back to the Cabots of 1750.

Dr. Julius Klein

• • •

The tenacity with which New England clings to its foreign trade and the way in which our exporters expand this trade, is really amazing. It can only be primarily the result of giving customer satisfaction.

• • •

President F. A. Merrick of Westinghouse Electric in a statement given us today says of the electrical trade:

"While the short time outlook in the industry shows a much lower trend than has been the case in recent years, there are many aspects of the situation that promise improvement. There are the extension of electrical service to the farm, the country progressing with increasing rapidity, there are important projects in the rehabilitation of transportation systems, some now under way and others approaching maturity.

• • •

"Many of the important lines of industry have passed this period of relatively slack business to rehabilitate their plants and many companies have cash which generally means increased electrical equipment. All branches of government, federal, state and municipal, are joining in an effort to advance construction of useful public works, large ones under present conditions there is ground for expectation that the usual prosperity in the households of the country will be accelerated throughout the coming year, with attendant increase in the appliances which will create this added use.

• • •

"And beyond all this is the basic fact that goods in the hands of the public are daily being consumed, that the shelves of the dealers are being cleaned up and the stocks of distributors lessened—thus the fundamentals of a normal return to sound business in all lines are working themselves out as must ever be the case. This is too large and too fundamentally prosperous a country to stand still for any long period."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Wall Street and the business community in general is hopeful for a upswing in business and industry this year, but no immediate expansion is looked for. Stiffening of bond and commodity prices when they come, will be the most reliable guide posts on the road to better times.

Auto and Specialty Stocks Best Actors

Automobile and specialty shares were among today's best actors Auburn led the specialty issue, was a wide mover. General Motors was steady most of the session. Although automotive employment and production are increasing around the annual show period, his automotive stocks are showing a tendency to move with rather than against the market, although they have been frequently upturn leaders in the past at this period.

Strong-Armed Public Utilities Slip Back

The utility stocks, which were strong-armed in the last 10 minutes of Wednesday's session by the pools and investment trusts for "window dressing" purposes, slipped back in their old ways today. Both the American Water Works lost 5 points, while American Gas on the Curb at the same time was 8 points lower.

Scale Buying in Blaw-Knox

Scale buying has been coming into Blaw-Knox on a small scale recently, but today the stock has encountered moderate selling. This represented accumulation by interests close to the company, which has been one of the exceptions among the steel concerns the past year. Results for 1930 will show up comparatively better than many others in the steel industry. It has been learned that officials are confident of the outlook for the current year

Liquidation in Reynolds Tobacco

Some further liquidation has come in Reynolds Tobacco in the last few weeks. Part of the selling has been attributed to the closing of some of the banks in the South where the stock is held widely. It is generally believed that depositors in these banks, having their funds tied up, were compelled to liquidate stocks to get cash money to meet regular expenses

National Dairy in Good Position

National Dairy Products is in a good position to benefit from a resumption of better economic conditions. Even in 1930 the company did remarkably well. For the first half net earnings equal to $2.13 a share, against $1.65 in the corresponding period of 1929. Conservative interests have estimated that for the entire year approximately $4 a share will be shown. It is possible that the decline in some of the commodities used by the company for raw material may result in an inventory loss, but this amount is likely to be comparatively small Buying International Telephone Delayed

International Telephone has reached levels at which some interests in the market intended buying a long time, but the buying has been postponed temporarily because of the stock. Another influence has been the uncertain conditions in several countries, particularly in South America. The company has made good progress toward important economies, but the feeling in Wall Street is that the future extension of activities will be at a slower pace than in the past.

Adams Express Co.'s Prospects

It has been so-called trust shares come into favor again Adams Express is likely to attract considerable attention. The company has a good record and despite the 1930 an admittedly unsatisfactory year for investment trusts, are likely to be in the neighborhood of $2 a share, a good showing. Dividends are paid at the rate of $1.60 a share annually. Management of the company is in hands of experienced bankers.

Group Operations in Anaconda

Many indications are seen that group operations are likely to be attempted in Anaconda early in the current year. Some accumulation has been in progress during all the recent reactions. The buying has come through houses which often have acted for important interests in the company. The company is in good financial condition. Declaration of the regular dividend about ten days ago was taken to reflect the confidence of the management in the future

Earnings Reports Comparisons Made

Earnings reports, compared with those for corresponding periods of a year ago, and dividend announcements by leading companies shape up as follows

	Since New Year	Oct 1 Addi- tions
Increased earnings	283	5
Decreased earnings	503	6
Unchanged dividends	1,019	5
Increased dividends	102	2
Decreased dividends	83	2
Omitted dividends	114	2

Heavy Covering in General Tank

Strength displayed by General American Tank was attributed largely to the short covering of an extensive short line. Aside from this demand, however, little aggressive support was encountered on the rally. This undoubtedly is due to the fact that investors are inclined to be somewhat wary of this stock at the present time due to the threats of competition from the pipeline systems. Thus far, this competition has not made any serious inroads on the earnings of General American Tank, but the growth of the pipeline system is expected to make competition more pronounced.

Utilities Are Bought by Trusts

Strength in some of the public utility stocks reflected operations by holding companies and investment trusts who were inclined to bolster their position over the year-end

Chesapeake Corp. Meets With Favor

Air Reduction in Better Demand

Air Reduction is again attracting attention in important speculative circles coincident with reports that a drive may be initiated against short interest in that stock. In the past, Air Reduction has been a favorite of an important group, but during recent weeks its sponsorship has been rather indifferent. Reports at current, however, that its sponsors would resume operations on a more aggressive basis in the large short interest which has been built up recently

Watch Immediate Movements for Clue

Movements during the first few days of the new year will be watched with unusual interest for a clue as to the immediate trend of the market. Although it is generally felt that the depression is gradually drawing to a close, there is considerable division of opinion as to whether or not the lows have been permanently established as the bottom. Both bulls and bears and investors are disposed to proceed with considerable caution

Any substantial upward movement would be materially improved if the market tested the recent lows in a most convincing manner after the turn of the year. Should it prove its ability to remain above the low points, investment buying undoubtedly would increase substantially.

On the other hand, a clear cut violation of either of the old lows also would attract increased investment demand. This would indicate definite bear control and anxious to re-enter the market, they prefer to await more convincing evidence before definitely committing themselves extensively.

American Loco's Assets $32,400,000

The 365,000 shares of American Locomotive preferred have been selling between 50 and 57 today. The common shares around 20, making the market value of the entire capitalization $20,000,000. Its current assets Oct. 31 were $32,400,000, of which $18,800,000 was either cash or marketable securities, mostly Government bonds.

Against net current assets of $32,400,000 from current valuation of $42,350,000 and there remains $9,900,000, representing plants and properties. Would anyone attempt to duplicate the plants and properties for $9,950,000, particularly when one considers that only a few years ago Railway Steel Spring Co. was reported by American Locomotive? At the time Railway Steel Spring had a market value in excess of present market value of American Locomotive.

Potato Futures to Be Traded in Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 2—Trading in potato futures will be started for the first time on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange Jan. 12, it was announced today.

Exchange members for several weeks have been conferring with potato dealers, drawing up rules for trading and organizing the new market.

Trading will open in Idaho russets, for March delivery. The U. S. No. 1 grading will be used as the standard, with a few changes that will make the exchange requirements slightly higher than that grading. Trading will be in carlot units of 36,000 pounds.

Appliance Sales in New England Up

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Sales of domestic appliances by the 12 retail units of the New England Power Association, a subsidiary of International Paper & Power Co., were well over the $2,000,000 mark in 1930, an increase of about 20 per cent over sales in 1929, a preliminary estimate by the association shows.

Cosden Cancels Oil Price Cuts

New York, Jan. 2—Cosden Oil Co. has posted new prices for Howard and Glasscock counties in Texas crude oil which restores to the larger part the prices which it was paying before its recent reduction.

New York, Jan. 2—Rubber futures today were barely steady, Jan., 8.30; March, 8.30; May, 8.60. New contracts: Jan., 8.30 offered; March, 8.65 offered; May, 8.80 offered.

TRADING DULL ON THE CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 2—Extreme dullness was the feature of Curb market trading today. Activity was at a lower rate than at any time in the holiday period, and prices backed and filled within narrow limits.

The first opening of the new year on Thursday. There was some profit-taking from the Wednesday closing, which had been marked by a boom in some of the utilities and specialties. However, little effort was made to extend that advance American Gas & Electric, whose 17-point net rise in the last session reflected extensive covering, chumped about a dozen points

Electric Bond & Share, American Superpower, United Light "A," Middle West Utilities and American & Foreign Power warrants were rather irregular but shared in the general apathy. St. Regis Paper, another Wednesday feature, lost a couple of points.

Industrials, oils and investment trusts were unusually dull. Swift International and Humble "A" dipped a point, but others were fairly steady in their influenced appearances on the tape.

INSURANCE

357 Men in U. S. Carry Million or Over in Insurance

Pierre S. du Pont Covered by Largest Amount Endowment Policies Are Sound Investments Accident Policy Protects Income for Working Man

By Frank F. Loomis

Statistics show that there are 357 men in the United States who carry $1,000,000 or more of life insurance. This is an increase of one dollar policy holders of 34 over last year. These policies run from $1,000,000 to $7,500,000 on a single life.

The names comprise statesmen, lawyers, financiers, underwriters, merchants, doctors, actors, actresses, real estate men and others, the largest insured man being Mr. Pierre S. du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., who carries $7,000,000. The next highest insured man is Mr. John D. Martin, of Philadelphia, who carries $6,540,000.

It is the intentions of most men to save money, but the great majority of them keep on intending to save money until they reach middle age. Then it is not as much procrastination as it is the lack of a definite plan that holds them back. Usually, it comes to accumulating property.

Men want to save, many of them try to save, but nine out of ten majority do not succeed. Fewer men at 65 years of age have $100 in cash than 5 years before, after 40 years of hard work. Men and women need a definite plan that will help them save money.

• • •

Life insurance, maturing as an endowment at ages 55, 60 or 65 years, furnishes the means to attain a definite objective. A life insurance policy is a contract, and it diminishes just enough of insistence that compels men to save. It furnishes the definite savings or means for saving a portion of our rent earnings each year.

Moreover, the endowment, which matures after middle age, works with a compound interest factor with time enough to accomplish the objective. Such a contract even discounts time, should the need arise.

It guarantees, in the event of the death of the insured, to give his dependents the full amount of the money that he had planned to save, cumulate. The whole program of saving under an endowment plan is reliable for its face amount for the benefit of dependents, at the death of the insured

Many well-organized programs for accumulating property and savings have been defeated by ill-health. Good times mean nothing to the man whose earning power has been cut off by permanent disability through either sickness or accident. An old age endowment contract with complete disability benefits added, makes up the ideal savings and protection program.

In event of the total and permanent disability of the saver, he is relieved of any worry of being unable to complete his savings program, because the insurance company completes the program for him.

In addition, it pays him, as a disability income $10 per month for each thousand dollars of the face of his contract. It actually replaces a part of his earning power during that period of total and permanent disability, and in addition, the company completes for him the plan that he would have completed, had he remained in good health.

Endowment contracts maturing after middle age measure up to all the major requirements of the ideal program for long time investing. And with the complete disability benefits added, they furnish many features that are not found in any form of investing or accumulating property.

There are more than 2,500,000 people between 70 and 80 years of age in the United States and Canada, according to statistics, and more than 600,000 between 80 and 90 years; over 50,000 between 80 and 100; and about 5000 over 100 years old. These figures prove the importance of life insurance, because 85 per cent to 90 per cent of a person's income comes from what he earns rather than from what he saves.

Usually when a person reaches the age of 65 or 70 years, he is not in position to earn enough. The only way to play the game is to play it safely by providing for the days you will live after you are past the earning period.

SPECTATOR'S VIEWS GIVEN

By SPECTATOR

To those awaiting opportunities for investment in the stock market, the purchase of good bonds is suggested. Some experts predict a broad upward movement in high-grade bonds this year.

Dividend Payers

According to a prominent broker-age house the failure of the big-corporations to reduce the dividend rate during the recent depression is largely responsible for the present high yields on many issues. Only 5 per cent Of this group 19 stocks represented leading companies, while 28 definite cuts were in specialty class, in which trading was insignificant.

Interest Rates Cut

The reduction in interest rates to be paid by banks on their deposits has carried these rates to the lowest levels in history. With the return on prime short-term investments below 2 per cent, the banks could not continue to pay 1½ per cent on checking accounts. Once again it should be said that a plentiful credit supply and easy money will constitute an important auxiliary to the business recovery.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

State Street brokers who have recommended International Nickel round present levels are now of the opinion that the long commitments taken on their advice should be disposed of.

They feel that even though the recent dividend be maintained earnings are likely to continue to decline, and it is best to make purchases of shares that have a more inviting outlook.

Boston brokers who asked to select the security that they think will offer the best speculative action during the coming year are placing Bethlehem Steel among the most promising

They say this moderately priced equity is certain to do a tremendous amount of business on an enormous profit-to-sale basis because of its exclusive right to the Ashton process

TRADING QUIET, WITH WALL ST. HOPEFUL

New York, Jan. 2—The financial markets began the New Year soberly, but hopefully today. Trading was quiet.

The stock market developed moderate strength after a selling flurry during the early trading and bonds reflected investment buying.

The early selling was presumably in part profit taking on the upturn in the last two sessions of 1930. Profit taking definitely is until today will not be taxed until 1932.

CLOSING IS STRONG

The market closed strong after rising steadily on a broad upward rally that turned net losses of 1 to 6 points into advances of 1 to 4. Buying of the still and motor issues featured the advance.

Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and Auburn Auto rose 4; Erie, New York Central, Louisville & Nashville and Johns-Manville 2 to 3 and U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, American Can and American Telephone 1 to 2¼.

The rally was facilitated by an unexpectedly quick breaking of the year-end credit pressure. Call money renewed at 3 per cent, but dropped later to 1½, the lowest since December 27, and commercial discount rate of the Bank of France from 2½ to 2 per cent, placing it on a par with the London rate, was viewed constructively. With the Paris rate a full one per cent lower than London, the drain on London's gold stock should be lightened.

RAILS ARE HELPED

The share gains were helped by the knowledge that heads of the Eastern trunklines had promptly resumed conference after Christmas the details of the four-party unification plan.

Although Wall Street understands that tangible developments in consolidation may be delayed some months, it is believed that eventual consummation will result in the expenditure of $500,000,000 or more in deferred improvements.

The oils were braced by developments leading to the hope that the slump in gasoline prices may be at an end. Standard Oil of New Jersey announced an increase in tank car lots to 7 cents a gallon, F. O. B. Atlantic seaboard. This increase amounts to ¾ cent at Bayonne, N. J., and ½ at Baltimore. Earlier in the week, Sinclair announced an increase in tank wagon prices in the East.

The motor shares responded to announcements of new models and prices. Although prices are lower in most cases, reductions have been made in the hope of stimulating sales.

While estimates of 1931 production are around 5,000,000 units, against 3,500,000 in 1930 and 5,600,000 in 1929, makers in the market showed reductions in the large overhead costs which developed during the peak year of 1929.

Electricals Given $30,000,000 Order

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—General Electric Co. and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. have been awarded contracts by the Safe Harbor Waterpower Corp. for six generators for the Safe Harbor hydro-electric development at Safe Harbor, Pa. Four of the generators will be built by General Electric and two by Westinghouse. The six units will involve an investment of $30,000,000.

Jersey Standard Raises Gasoline

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, effective immediately, has advanced the price of U. S. motor gasoline in tank car lots to 7 cents a gallon, f. o. b. Atlantic seaboard. This is an advance of ¾ cent at Bayonne, N. J., and ¼ cent at Baltimore. The rise is the first important upturn in wholesale gasoline quotations since early last April.

Grains Are Strong in Chicago Market

Chicago, Jan. 2—Grains closed strongest today with the market showing covering featuring trade in the first session of the new year. Outside interest in the market showed some improvement. Closing prices for wheat were unchanged to 3¼c higher, with July showing the strength. Corn was 2¾ to 3¾c higher and oats 1½ to 1¾c up. Rye showed gains of 1¾ to 2¼c.

Acceptance Rates Lowered in Boston

First National-Old Colony Corp. has reduced acceptance rates one-eighth of 1 per cent to 1½ per cent for 30, 60 and 90 days, 2-1¾ per cent for 120 days and 2¼-2 per cent for 150 to 180 days.

Shawmut Corp has reduced acceptances ¼ per cent to 1½ per cent bid for 30, 60 and 90 days, 2 per cent for 120 days and 2¼ per cent for 150 and 180 days.

Boston Gas Output for Month Larger

Boston Consolidated Gas Co. reports output for December of 1,189,591 cubic feet; an increase of 12.3 per cent, compared with December, 1929. For 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1930, output totaled 11,155,203,000 cubic feet, against 10,636,029,000 cubic feet in 1929, increase of 49 per cent.

Mining Exchange President Resigns

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—Heber C. Hicks, former securities commissioner of Utah, has resigned as president and manager of the New York Mining Exchange, effective immediately. The exchange was organized recently and has done very little business.

Social Organizations

THROUGH the generosity of the public we are able day by day to relieve want and distress, and help the needy to self-dependence.
In 1930, with larger resources entrusted to us, we were able to reach more people. We take this means of thanking those friends, old and new, who made this possible. We also extend, both to those who have helped us carry on our work and to those who as yet have not experienced the joy of giving,

What Power Use Shows

New England Ready for Renewed Activity

Anyone who doubts the march of electric power should read the analysis of 1930 by Paul S. Clapp of the National Electric Light Association.

The electrical industry spent fourteen thousand million dollars this year for new construction and maintenance of existing facilities. Of that sum, $860,000,000 was for new construction.

The capacity was increased by 2,750,000 horsepower, of which 750,000 was water-power.

New customers of electricity increased 550,000. Of these, 472,000 were domestic users. About 100,000 farms were electrified during the year, making a total of 880,000 farms now using electric power.

Here we have a single industry expending in a single year for maintenance and new construction alone a sum that Midas or Croesus or Monte Cristo did not conceive even in THEIR most optimistic dreams.

We see produced in a single year more power than would have been needed to operate all the industries of America 100 years ago.

We see modern comforts and conveniences brought to several hundred thousand new homes and domestic drudgery and farm labor relieved.

This industry, it must be said in all fairness, responded nobly to President Hoover's appeal for relief from economic distress.

It has built well toward the future, because consumption of electrical power decreased 1.6 per cent, due to the idleness of industrial plants.

But take the New England vista. We are informed by the Edison Company of Boston that its output for the year has increased 5.3 per cent in contrast with the loss throughout the country.

The use of electricity by industry is quite a good barometer of industrial activity. Measured by it, New England, as has been said repeatedly in these columns, is in better shape than the other sections of the country and is in a splendid condition to reap the benefits of the future renewal of prosperity.

Credit for the Police

Good Work Wins Praise

Police Commissioner Hultman is getting a great number of very pleasing communications these days. These letters and calls tell him of the fine work done by officers and men in the department over the holidays, and they come from the business men and others who have on occasion suffered from unpleasant incidents that resulted from holiday crowds and confusion.

This holiday time was notable for the absence of express wagon robberies and thefts from delivery trucks, among other things. A specially picked detective squad put an end to the usual terrorizing of drivers and truck owners. Looting of merchandise displays by thieves, who first smashed windows and then fled with whatever they could snatch, also was eliminated by police watchfulness.

The great crowds of shoppers in the congested districts were cared for without a single serious accident. Traffic was kept moving, there were no serious and irritating jams. Shopping and driving were made as comfortable as possible.

Mr. Hultman believes a police officer can be efficient, helpful and courteous at the same time.

A Hiram Ricker Exhibit

Maine to Have Permanent Exposition

Hiram W. Ricker sleeps the long sleep, cradled at Poland Spring by the hills and mountains of his beloved State of Maine.

But the great ideas he had for the advancement and welfare of his state and for all New England go marching on. The awakened spirit of New England, embodied in the New England Council, and the hundreds of miles of roads which have opened up the unmatched delights of New England to all the world and have made these states the nation's summer playground, are his real monuments.

The decision of the Maine Publicity Bureau to maintain and establish a permanent exhibit of Maine products in the Pine-tree State building in Portland brings to fruition another of the many plans dear to the heart of Mr. Ricker. It is a fitting tribute to the memory of the late president of the New England Council that this exhibit should be called the Hiram W. Ricker Memorial Exhibit of Maine-Made Products.

The exhibit, which will occupy a large area of space, will be open next summer. More than $100,000,000 was taken into Maine in 1930 by tourists. A check of outside automobiles through Longfellow Square in 1930 showed a total of 48,202, east-bound machines in Portland alone.

This exhibit of Maine-made products cannot but give a tremendous increase to the fame of the state and its industries.

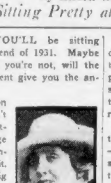
Sitting Pretty at End of 1931

MAYBE YOU'LL be sitting pretty by the end of 1931. Maybe you won't. If you're not, will the following incident give you the answer?

The horn on my car wouldn't work, so I waited in the garage while they tinkered with it. Fascinating big caverns — garages. The huge cars, lierded in the shadows—the splatter of oily light on their great humped backs—that animal stench of oil and heated steel—the sudden blast and squeal and roar of machinery. The young men scurrying suddenly, in and out of the shadows, prodding, pushing the big black brutes—grooming them like mahouts.



Elsie Robinson

While I waited I gossiped with the boss. Five o'clock blew. Whereupon, of course, every man there made for the street door in three jumps. One of them—a youngster of twenty—brushed past us. Directly across his path lay a fine wrench. But what was a wrench with some Maybelle or Lucille waiting around the corner? With a flip, his trained toe sent it flying under the machine, and he was off.

"And then they wonder why they don't get a raise," said the boss, picking it up.

What's a wrench to them? They didn't buy it. They didn't drop it there. They aren't paid to pick that particular wrench up. Then, why should they bother to put it in the tool room? That's the way they reason.

"Never seems to occur to them that there's more to a job—any job—than one set of chores and one set of tools—or that they'd be furthering their own careers if they took an interest in things in general.

"Unusually careless? No. He's just an average youngster. Nine out of ten kids—American kids—are like that. Old country youngsters—they're different. They're drilled in their jobs just as soldiers are drilled in an army. They get so they take their work seriously—nothing's too small to be important.

"But you can't get the average American boy to see things that way. He acts as if he was doing you a favor by working at all—as if he ought to be given a job just on his good looks. Even now, when times are so hard, that's the way they act."

That's what a boss said—an American boss of American boys. IS IT TRUE?

Is that the way the average young American worker—boy or girl—regards his job?

Has money been so easy for the younger generation that they've never learned, as their fathers did, to TAKE THEIR WORK SERIOUSLY?

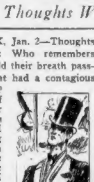
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—Thoughts while strolling: Who remembers when people held their breath passing a house that had a contagious disease sign? The inside of the Chrysler building looks like salami. I like that song lyric: "Just a cheerful little earful of the well known I love you."



Berton Braley, a Madison, Wis., boy, who made good in the city. A pocket watch running in a bowl of water. Not enough meringue on New York's lemon pies. There's an exemplar of the new feminine freedom—a lady in spats. Ina Claire has a California tan.

Midgets are always nattily attired. W. G. Shephard, a great reporter. Wish I could hear Nora Bayes sing "Shine on Harvest Moon" again. Somebody should star Patsy Kelly. Gilbert Miller looks like Lord Birkenhead. The long and short of it—Fannie Brice and Billy Rose. To Paul Whiteman: Come on home.

Who remembers when a wish was not a yen? They say Lindbergh can go for a chocolate malted milk. Moss and Fontana are about the only ballroom dancers left. A few more weeks and another birthday. I can never remember the meaning of fata morgana. Edna Leedom.

* * *

Big Bill Edwards is reputed a marvelous dancer. What's become of the bloods who used to wear gloves in upper coat pockets? Nothing looks so frisky as a white poodle after a bath. Nobody to me expresses the languor of beauty like Mrs. Irving Berlin.

What happened to Dolores, the Ziegfeld show girl? Who learned to walk that way balancing heavy books upon her head. Suddery to think of the unsolvable murders in this town. And the unspeakable graft. Anyway it soft-pedaled stage cracks about Chicago.

A drum beats. And the thin note of a life—but its only the ballyhoo for a movie. Everywhere sham. Fake antique shops, double-crossers, ship scuttlers and cutthroats. Still life is pretty grand. And I wouldn't be this way if I hadn't stuffed myself with sausage for breakfast.

* * *

Vagrant thought: I have never yet visited a town where they had no sidewalks that it didn't pour down rain.

* * *

Mr. Marquis with his original "What's Who" upset a cart of apples. Everyday notables are solicited for data on new variants of the idea—"Who's Who on Park Avenue," "Who's Who Below 14th Street," "Who's Who in Wall Street," "Who's Who in Hollywood" and to top it all today came a questionnaire from a "Who's Who on the Ohio River."

* * *

As a minor trailer of sartorial hoopla nothing to my notion is so utterly don't carish as a huge, belted canary colored camel's hair coat with enormous patch pockets. Touched off with a white muffler it's the last gasp.

* * *

He is the pronounced molar type greeting you with: "Lo, young fruit!" And also taps cigarette ends on his wrist, stops now and then to lift his hat and flirt back his hair. Furthermore, this morning he removed a handkerchief from his cuff to wipe his hands after knocking a taxi driver for a loop who yelled: "Yoo hoo!" in falsetto. Moral: You can't always tell.

Homer Croy's original trick of reaching into a goldfish bowl and eating a slice of carrot which he had hidden and which he wriggled to his mouth is now featured in a half dozen vaudeville skits. The first time Croy pulled it was at a dinner party in the red plush parlor of a Missouri crossroads home. It resulted in Courtney Ryley Cooper, another guest, being rushed all the way to Kansas City Hospital to stop him from gagging. He greens under the gills now when it is mentioned.

One of the reasons why Xmas to grown ups is such a dud is that most of us are harking back to the adolescent fun we had opening our presents around the old base-burner—the base-burner topped by a brass Hercules defying, well, whatever Herc defies. Or maybe it was Ajax. I know so little of botany.

Propaganda Among Churchmen

[An Editorial From the Washington Post.]

Through an ingenious combination of wheels within whee an attempt is on foot to concentrate the influence of all t Protestant churches of America in behalf of a political questio now before the Senate. A "Commission on International Ju tice and Good Will," apparently created by the "Federal Cou cil of Churches of Christ in America," and engineered by skilled propagandist, now announces that an alarm is to sent throughout the country, calling upon all churc members to bombard their Senators in behalf of the so-called Wor Court.

In the name of peace and international good will the churches are to be drawn into a political agitation. The circular note accompanying the blank petitions which are distributed does not hesitate to make a misleading statement of fundamental importance in connection with the World Court issue. It asserts that the reservations made by the Senate "have been met by the protocols submitted by the President on December 10, 1930. . . . If action thus taken by the Senate after careful and thorough deliberation is now to be repudiated, the foreign relations of the United States cannot be carried on."

This statement is so grossly misleading that it can hardly be the product of ignorance. It deserves the immediate attention of the gentlemen who have lent their names to the propaganda, in order that they may not be criticised as deliberate participants in a scheme to delude members of the churches.

Instead of "meeting" the Senate's reservation, the formula now submitted to the Senate proposes to reverse the conditions imposed by the Senate. The Senate insisted that the World Court, without the consent of the United States, should not consider any request for an advisory opinion on any question affecting the United States. The formula now proposed would permit the Court to consider such requests, notwithstanding the objection of the United States. A careful scrutiny of the formula by any church member will substantiate the fac here asserted.

But the propagandist who is handling this plan to embroil the churches in this political question now tries to make it appear that if the Senate should insist upon its reservation it will be "repudiating" its action of January, 1926. He adds the preposterous statement that unless the World Court treaty is ratified the foreign relations of the United States cannot be carried on. In other words, unless the Senate ratifies the World Court treaty, the United States will find itself cut off from diplomatic communication with all other nations!

Such propaganda, directed at church members who cannot be expected to make individual examination of the facts concerning the so-called World Court, is nothing short of a swindle. It is an attempt to take advantage of the peace-loving sentiment of citizens in order to push through a scheme to entangle the United States in a foreign political system.

Every church member who receives one of these circulars should take the time to study the question personally. He can soon verify the fact that clever propagandists are at work attempting to deceive him.

For Our Aged and Infirm

Present Law Needs Change

Rev. Dr. Patrick H. Callanan, pastor of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge, observed the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood by creating a trust fund to furnish entertainment for the inmates of the Cambridge Home for Aged and Infirm People.

Age, ache and penury were said by Shakespeare to be the weariest misfortunes of worldly life.

In the modern rush for gain and gold, we are prone to ignore and forget those who marched down the pathway of time ahead of us with heads erect until the triumvirate of misfortunes described by the English bard settled upon them.

A man or a woman who has led a good and useful life, who has borne the heat and struggle of the day and who has been overcome by adversities in late years is entitled to a pension that may relieve penury and the stigma of pauperism.

It is a pension they have earned by their own contributions to the economic and cultural life of the commonwealth. And how much better it would be to set them up in ease and independence and dignity, where the experiences of their lives could be consulted for the benefit of all, than to intern them in bleak houses to be abandoned by the public or scoffed at by the inconsiderate and self-sufficient!

Massachusetts has slowly and grudgingly recognized the philosophy stated here and has created what her legislators are pleased to term an "old-age assistance" law. The incoming Legislature should strip this law of its vexations and annoyances and its pestiferous investigations of the worthy aged by busybody State officials; and it should promptly enact a genuine old-age pension law which will dignify our aged people rather than pester them.

This State has established a public bequest fund, under the management of the Secretary of State and the State Treasurer, to which public donations can be made for suitable care of the aged and infirm. Our public officials are obligated to advertise the existence of this fund in order that contributions may be made to it by our well-disposed people of means. Why they have not heralded its existence to the four corners of the State with enthusiasm is a question they ought to be called upon to explain.

Studying Our History

Professor Halvdan Koht, the eminent Norwegian historian tells a Boston audience that study of American history will soon be made obligatory in universities and colleges throughout the world.

History, literature and language follow the dollar sign.

America becomes the creditor of world Nations and they want to know something of the traditions, customs and, no doubt, the gullibility and idiosyncrasies of the fellow they owe money.

They have shaved off forty-nine per cent of the war debts they owe, and perhaps they can find a new streak of vanity or "generosity" in Uncle Sam's makeup that will enable them to palaver off a few more hundred millions.

We might take REAL pride out of the fact that India, for example, is studying the REAL history of the United States; that is, the history made by the early patriots who had some regard for the independence and integrity of the country.
